A Taxonomy of Visual Processes William R. Uttal,1981 A Taxonomy of Visual Processes William R. Uttal,1981

A Taxonomy of Visual Processes William R. Uttal,2014-06-27 Originally published in 1981 this third volume deals with the empirical data base and the theories concerning visual perception the set of mental responses to photic stimulation of the eyes As the book develops the plan was to present a general taxonomy of visual processes and phenomena It was hoped that such a general perspective would help to bring some order to the extensive but largely unorganized research literature dealing with our immediate perceptual responses to visual stimuli at the time The specific goal of this work was to provide a classification system that integrates and systematizes the data base of perceptual psychology into a comprehensive intellectual scheme by means of an eclectic multi level metatheory invoking several different kinds of explanation Visual Form Detection in Three-dimensional Space W. R. Uttal,2013-08-21 Published in the year 1982 Visual Form Detection in Three dimensional Space is a valuable contribution to the field of Cognitive Psychology The Processes of Visual Perception William R. Utall,MICHIGAN UNIV ANN ARBOR INST FOR SOCIAL RESEARCH.,University of Michigan. Institute for Social Research,1979 This report summarizes the contents of a book entitled The Processes of Visual Perception written during the course of this contract The book presents a classification system of visual processes that organizes and arranges the extensive data base of perceptual science The taxonomy consists of 6 levels Level 0 Preneuronal Transformations Level 1 Receptor Transformations Level 2 Neural Network Transformations Level 3 Figural Organization Processes Level 4 Multidimensional Interactions and Level 5 Image Manipulation Level 5 is not discussed in this book It will be the topic of the next book in the series of which this present one is the third volume This progress report presents a brief summary of each of the chapters in the book as well as the entire last chapter This final epilog entitled Emerging Principles of Visual Perception was the target towards which this entire research project was aimed At the outset of the book it was asserted that the major contribution it could make would be the statement of current thinking in the field of perceptual science This list of principles as well as the taxonomy itself is a synthetic and integrative metatheory of perceptual processing as our science sees it in the last third of the twentieth century Author Representation in the Brain Asim Roy,Leonid Perlovsky,Tarek Besold,Juyang Weng,Jonathan Edwards,2018-09-28 This eBook contains ten articles on the topic of representation of abstract concepts both simple and complex at the neural level in the brain Seven of the articles directly address the main competing theories of mental representation localist and distributed Four of these articles argue either on a theoretical basis or with neurophysiological evidence that abstract concepts simple or complex exist have to exist at either the single cell level or in an exclusive neural cell assembly There are three other papers that argue for sparse distributed representation population coding of abstract concepts There are two other papers that discuss neural implementation of symbolic models The remaining paper deals with learning of motor skills from imagery versus actual execution A summary of these papers is

Toward a New Behaviorism William R. Uttal,1998 This volume examines the scientific basis of reductionist approaches to understanding visual perception The author makes the provocative argument that contemporary neuroscience and cognitive science have gone off on a wild goose chase in the search for reductionist explanations of perceptual phenomena This book considers some specific and general examples of this misdirection and suggests an alternative future course for science It reviews the successes and failures of the sciences efforts to explain perceptual and other mental functions in the terms of either internal cognitive mechanisms formal models or the neural structures from which the brain the organ of the mind is constructed Although this is an iconoclastic and minority view the book shows how many contemporary perceptual scientists have qualified their thinking with regard to what their data and theories mean even while generally accepting the empirical findings It is without question an attempted refutation of some of the primary assumptions of contemporary theory Summing up the author s convictions concerning some of the most important questions of human nature this book is a statement of a point of view that has provided a framework for his personal answers to some of these important questions of human history

Neural Darwinism Gerald M. Edelman, 1987-12-06 One of the nation's leading neuroscientists presents a radically new view of the function of the brain and the nervous system Its central idea is that the nervous system in each individual operates as a selective system resembling natural selection in evolution but operating by different mechanisms This far ranging theory of brain functions is bound to stimulate renewed discussion of such philosophical issues as the mind body problem the origins of knowledge and the perceptual bases of language Notes and Index
