Deployability In Peacetime 2002:

Analysis of the U. S. Military's Ability to Sustain an Occupation in Iraq Adam Talaber, 2008-09 Compares prior estimates of the size of an occupation force that the U S military can sustain in Iraq with the military's actual practice up to Oct 2005 The DoD made policy decisions that increased its ability to sustain a larger occupation force compared with a previous estimate That includes terminating the U S military mission in Bosnia reducing the U S presence in NE Asia and adopting more demanding goals for how rapidly U S forces should rotate through extended deployments The major difference between the size of an occupation force in Iraq 2003 10 05 and the estimate of the size of a sustainable force derives from DoD's practice of deploying active and reserve component units at rates in excess of what are considered sustainable Illus Deployability in Peacetime Bruce R. Orvis, 2002 This documented briefing provides formal documentation of work previously undertaken on behalf of the then Chief of Staff of the Army General Dennis Reimer and the Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel Lieutenant General Frederick Vollrath to examine issues of deployability in peacetime Army Chief of Staff's initial questions were What is the non deployable rate using United Status Report USR wartime criteria and How much does this rate change over time These questions grew from the general perception that the wartime non deployable rate is on the order of 4 percent whereas the peacetime non deployable rates being reported at the time the questions were raised were substantially higher That led to a concern about whether the rate changes over time and in particular from the point shortly before a unit is notified of the deployment to shortly thereafter The research in this documented briefing was conducted in 1998 1999 for Stabilization Forces SFORs 4 7 It reflects Army policies and deployment guidelines in effect at that time Our research indicated that the USR wartime non deployable rate at the deploying installations was indeed in the 4 percent range and that it did not change much over time PAIS International in Print Catherine Korvin, 2003-05 This book contains bibliographic references with abstracts and subject headings to public and social policy literature and to world politics published in print and electronic formats international focus Selected Rand Abstracts Rand Corporation, 2002 Includes publications previously listed in the supplements to the Index of selected publications of the Rand Corporation Oct 1962 Feb 1963 The U.S. Army and the New National Security Strategy Lynn E.
