

Charge Temperature Sensor

The charge temperature sensor (CTS) is a device mounted on the intake manifold which measures the temperature of the incoming air. The sensor, mounted in the charge manifold, supplies the logic module information on the temperature of the incoming air/fuel mixture. The CTS is the charge temperature sensor (charge temp) sensor. It is located in the charge manifold and provides information on the charge temperature to the logic module. The charge temperature sensor provides information on the charge temperature to the logic module. The charge temperature sensor provides information on the charge temperature to the logic module.

Throttle Body Temperature Sensor

The throttle body temperature sensor (TBS) is mounted in the throttle body. It provides information on the throttle body temperature to the logic module. The throttle body temperature sensor provides information on the throttle body temperature to the logic module.

Throttle Position Sensor (TPS)

The TPS is a variable resistor which is operated by the movement of the throttle shaft. It is mounted in the throttle body and between the engine and throttle body assembly.

A voltage signal is produced by the sensor which varies with the angle of the throttle shaft. This signal is sent to the logic module where it is used to adjust air/fuel ratio during acceleration, deceleration, idle and wide open throttle conditions.

Engine Switches

Several switches provide operating information to the logic module. These include the oil pressure safety, air conditioning clutch, and brake light switches. If one or more of these switches is sensed as being in the "on" position, the logic module signals the Automatic Idle Speed Motor (AIM) to increase the speed to a specific RPM. With the air conditioning on and the throttle blade above a specific angle, the wide open throttle circuit prevents the air conditioning clutch from engaging until the throttle blade angle is reduced.

FUEL SYSTEM

Fuel Pump

An electric, constant-displacement, vane type fuel pump is located in the fuel tank on an integral part of the fuel pump sending unit. The fuel pump draws fuel from the fuel tank and sends the fuel to the fuel filter. The fuel filter is located in the fuel line between the fuel tank and the fuel filter. The fuel filter is located in the fuel line between the fuel tank and the fuel filter. The fuel filter is located in the fuel line between the fuel tank and the fuel filter.

Fuel Regulator

On two-valve models, the fuel regulator supplies fuel to the fuel injector at a constant 50 psi (3.4 kg/cm²) pressure. On four-valve models, the regulator supplies fuel to the fuel rail and to four injectors at a constant 50 psi (3.4 kg/cm²) pressure.

Fuel Injector

The fuel injector, an electrical solenoid, is mounted in the throttle body on four-valve models and the fuel rail on the injector is connected into the existing air stream. On four-valve models, 4 injectors are mounted on a fuel rail, supplying the intake manifold with the proper fuel ratio.

While power to the injector is supplied by the power module, it is controlled by indirect signal from the logic module, which actually determines when and how long the injector is open. When electric current is supplied to the injector, an integral armature and piston valve move a short distance against a spring, opening a small orifice.

Fuel supplied to the injector is forced around the piston valve and through the opening, resulting in a fine spray of fuel in the shape of a hollow cone. Whereas a constant pressure drop is maintained across the injector (by the pressure regulator), the length of time that this opening is maintained (injector "on" time) determines the amount of fuel entering the engine and, therefore, the air/fuel ratio.
