

The New Blueprint for Student Success

Build a More Scalable, Effective Student Support Model with Population Health Management Principles

Colleges and universities have started to make big investments in student success, but improving outcomes is still a challenge with highly complex student populations and limited capacity.

An emerging strategy from the health care industry could provide a new blueprint for student success efforts. Population health management has improved outcomes – like fewer ER visits and avoidable readmissions – and reduced costs by having hospitals change the way they deliver services to patients with different needs. Could higher education do the same?

This infographic outlines how key elements of a population health management approach can be applied to student success, including strategies you can implement today to begin the shift toward population-based student support. ✓

An Innovative Framework
Organize Your Student Population with Need Stratification

Building Blocks for Success
Create Differentiated Care Pathways to Match Different Student Needs

The New Architects
Develop Accountable Owners

HIGH NEED

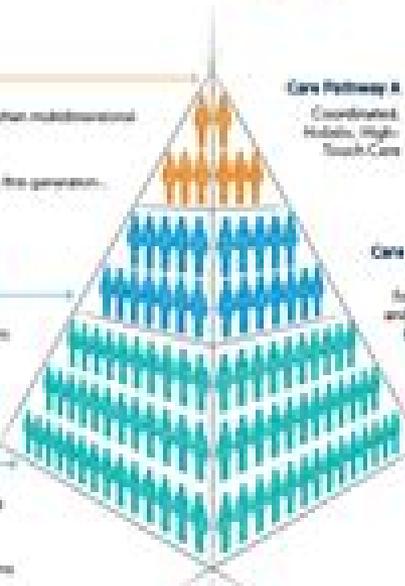

- Students with easily identifiable, but often multidimensional obstacles to completion
- High predicted costs
 - May include characteristics such as first generation, at-risk, or parenting student
 - On probation
 - Supportive family or staff

RISING NEED

- Students whose profiles and behaviors indicate a possible increased level of risk
- Moderate predicted costs
 - Indicators of emerging concern (e.g. declining GPA, financial hold)

LOW NEED

- Students with no visible indicators of probable attrition
- Low predicted costs
 - No data based on observed concern

Care Pathway A

Coordinated, Holistic, High-Touch Care

Provide holistic and high-touch care that addresses the many dimensions of potential attrition and manage students' interactions with the support system

- Academic Support
- Academic Advising
- Continued Care Liaison

Care Pathway B

Monitoring for Escalation and Immediate Intervention

Continuously monitor students for early indicators of need and provide targeted interventions to proactively intervene and course correct

- Faculty Support
- Student Support
- Student Success
- Student Success

Care Pathway C

Preventative Education and Enabled Self-Direction

Reduce attrition through proactive behavioral nudges, resources for effective self-advocacy, and incentivized actions to support success

- Academic Support
