

Boiling Point Elevation and Freezing Point Depression

The lower vapor pressure of the solution causes an increase in the boiling point because the temperature required to equal the vapor pressure to the atmospheric pressure is greater than what it is for the solvent.

Liquid-solid transition is associated with entropy decrease since a less disordered state is formed. To drive this unfavorable transition, energy must be removed from the system. And this energy is higher for the freezing of solution since it has a higher entropy. Therefore, the solution has a lower freezing point than its solvent.

Snyder, 2022-05-26 Organic Chemistry 13th Edition continues Solomons Fryle and Snyder s tradition of excellence in teaching and preparing students for success in both the classroom and beyond Central to the authors is their approach in emphasizing organic chemistry s relationship between structure and reactivity To accomplish this the content is organized in a way that combines the most useful features of a functional group approach with one largely based on reaction mechanisms The authors philosophy is to emphasize mechanisms and their common aspects as often as possible and at the same time use the unifying features of functional groups as the basis for most chapters The structural aspects of the authors approach show students what organic chemistry is Mechanistic aspects of their approach show students how it works And wherever an opportunity arises the authors show students what it does in living systems and the physical world around us
