Children with Cancer National Research Council,Institute of Medicine,National Cancer Policy Board,Committee on Shortening the Time Line for New Cancer Treatments,2005-05-01 The successes that have been achieved in treating childhood cancers stand as beacons against the less dramatic improvements for adults with cancer. Progress began to accelerate in the 1960s and 1970s as treatment regimens were built up primarily by building combinations of chemotherapeutic drugs. However, the near absence of research in pediatric cancer drug discovery threatens to halt the progress in childhood cancer treatment achieved during the past four decades. Making Better Drugs for Children with Cancer identifies the major issues to be addressed in developing new agents for childhood cancers, the gaps in research and development, and the steps that have been suggested to move the process forward. This report also makes a new proposal to capitalize on today's science to bring new treatments to children's cancers. Childhood Leukemia Nancy Keene, 2018

Approximately 3,300 children are diagnosed with leukemia in the United States each year. The illness and its treatment can have a devastating effect on family, friends, schoolmates, and the larger community. This newly updated edition of Childhood Leukemia contains the information and support parents need during this difficult time. Author Nancy Keene provides parents and family members with updates on treatment, including stem cell transplants, information about tailoring drug dosages to children's genetic profiles, and new methods for dealing with side effects. Practical advice on how to cope with medical procedures, hospitalization, school, family, and financial issues. Suggestions on ways to form a partnership with the medical team. Stories from family members who have coped with leukemia and its treatments. Updated resources for medical information, emotional support, and financial assistance. A pull-out medical record keeper. Parents who read this book will find understandable medical information, obtain advice that eases their daily life, and feel empowered to be strong advocates for their child. Pediatric Psychooncology David J. Bearison, Raymond K. Mulhern, 1994-05-26

Twenty to thirty years ago, the prognosis for children with cancer was dismal. Since then, remarkable advances in the treatment of childhood cancers have resulted in overall cure rates of 60 percent. In response to these improved prognoses, psychological frontiers of patient care and clinical research have evolved. Psychologists, as well as mental health professionals from other disciplines, are now routinely included in medical treatment planning and patient care. Psychosocial interventions with pediatric cancer patients and their families are guided by an increasingly sophisticated body of research findings that enhance their quality of life. With contributions from nationally recognized clinicians and researchers, this volume addresses the wide range of psychological issues inherent in pediatric oncology, including coping with pediatric cancer pain and symptom management, medication compliance, neuropsychological effects of disease and therapy, sibling and family relations, bereavement, and care of the dying child. Each author carefully defines his or her research area, discusses theoretical and methodological concerns, critically reviews and integrates research findings, and discusses unresolved issues as well as future directions for research. This balanced and comprehensive overview of pediatric psychooncology is essential reading for all those interested in the treatment of children diagnosed with cancer. Pediatric Cancer Survivors Karen Wonders, Brittany Stout, 2017-06-07

Pediatric cancer develops in 1 to 500 children. Typically, the type of cancers that develop in children is different than those that develop in adults in that they are often the result of a DNA mutation rather than environmental or lifestyle risk factors Leukemia brain and central nervous system tumors and neuroblastomas are the most common cancer types in child populations Children tend to respond better to anticancer treatments including chemotherapy and radiation However long term side effects are common in children often requiring follow up care and lifestyle intervention for the rest of their lives The percentage of 5 year survivors was over 50% for the most common cancers This suggests that a majority of cancers in this population are highly survivable As such research should focus on aspects of survivorship for these individuals This book will explore issues related to pediatric cancer and their associated treatments

Hope and Suffering Gretchen Marie Krueger,2008-08-18 Gretchen Krueger s narrative explores how doctors families and the public interpreted the experience of childhood cancer from the 1930s through the 1970s Pairing the transformation of childhood cancer from killer to curable disease with the personal experiences of young patients and their families Krueger illuminates the twin realities of hope and suffering Recounting the complex and sometimes contentious interactions among the families of children with cancer medical researchers physicians advocacy organizations the media and policymakers Krueger reveals that personal odyssey and clinical challenge are the simultaneous realities of childhood cancer This study will be of interest to historians medical practitioners and scientific researchers and anyone whose life has been touched by cancer Jacket A Child Shall Lead Them
