Dialectics Of Shopping:

The Dialectics of Shopping Daniel Miller,2001-03-01 Shopping is generally considered to be a pleasurable activity But in reality it can often be complicated and frustrating Daniel Miller explores the many contradictions faced by shoppers on a typical street in London and in the process offers a sophisticated examination of the way we shop and what it reveals about our relationships to our families and communities as well as to the environment and the economy as a whole Miller's companions are mostly women who confront these contradictions as they shop They placate their children with items that combine nutrition with taste or usefulness with style They decide between shopping at the local store or at the impersonal but less expensive mall They tell of their sympathy for environmental concerns but somehow avoid much ethical shopping They are faced with a selection of shops whose shifts and mergers often reveal extraordinary stories of their own Filled with entertaining and thoroughly familiar stories of shoppers and shops this book will interest scholars across a broad range of disciplines The Dialectics of Shopping Daniel Miller,2001-03 This text explores the many contradictions faced by shoppers on a typical London street and in the process offers a sophisticated examination of the way we shop and what it reveals about our relationships to our families and communities as well as to the environment and the economy as a whole

Morality and Monastic Revival in Post-Mao Tibet Jane E. Caple, 2019-03-31 The speed and extent of the Tibetan Buddhist monastic revival make it one of the most extraordinary stories of religious resurgence in post Mao China At the end of the 1970s there were no working monasteries within a decade thousands had been reconstructed and repopulated Most studies have focused on the political challenges facing Tibetan monasteries emphasizing their relationship to the Chinese state Yet in their efforts to revive and develop their institutions monks have also had to negotiate a rapidly changing society playing a delicate balancing act fraught with moral dilemma as well as political danger Drawing on the recent moral turn in anthropology this volume the first full length ethnographic study of the subject explores the social and moral dimensions of monastic revival and reform across a range of Geluk monasteries in northeast Tibet Amdo Qinghai Province from the 1980s on Author Jane Caple's analysis shows that ideas and debates about how best to maintain the mundane bases of monastic Buddhism economy and population are intermeshed with those concerning the proper role and conduct of monks and the ethics of monastic lay relations Facing a shrinking monastic population monks are grappling with the impacts of secular education demographic transition rising living standards urbanization and marketization all of which have driven debates within Buddhism elsewhere and fueled perceptions of monastic decline Some Tibetans including monks are even questioning the good of the mass form of monasticism that has been a distinctive feature of Tibetan society for hundreds of years Given monastic Buddhism's integral position in Tibetan community life and association with Tibetan identity Caple argues that its precarity in relation to Tibetan society raises questions about its future that go well beyond the issue of religious freedom
