Ecosystems of the Deep Oceans P.A. Tyler, 2003-03-27 This volume examines the deep sea ecosystem from a variety of perspectives The initial chapters examine the deep sea floor the deep pelagic environment and the more specialised chemosynthetic environments of hydrothermal vents and cold seeps These environments are examined from the perspective of the relationship of deep sea animals to their physico chemical environment Later chapters examine the biogeography of the main deep oceans Atlantic Pacific and Indian with particular attention to the downward flux of surface derived organic matter and how this drives the processes within the deep sea ecosystem The peripheral deep seas including the polar seas and the marginal deep seas inter alia the Mediterranean Red Caribbean and Okhotsk seas are explored in the same context The final chapters examine the processes occurring in the deep sea and include an analysis of why the deep sea has high species diversity how the fauna respond to organic input and how species have adapted reproductive activity in the deep sea The volume concludes with an analysis of the anthropogenic impact on the deep sea

The Biology of the Deep Ocean, 2001-12-21 The deep ocean environment is the most extensive on our planet Its denizens are normally unseen but whenever they are exposed to view they are regarded as bizarre aliens from a different world The Biology of the Deep Ocean takes a close look at this apparently hostile world and explains how its inhabitants are exquisitely adapted to survive and flourish within it The book begins with an analysis of how conditions in the oceanic environment differ from those in the familiar terrestrial world and then describes the techniques and ingenuity required to reveal the populations inhabiting the colossal volume of the deep oceans A section on primary production emphasizes how almost all deep sea life depends ultimately on the phytoplankton at the surface and the export flux to deeper water The ultimate beneficiaries of this export the populations on the deep sea floor are then discussed together with the unique features of life fuelled by chemosynthesis at hydrothermal vents and cold seeps The horizontal and vertical distribution patterns of deep sea animals and their changes in time and space are controlled by physical biological and historical factors The rapid reduction of biomass with depth puts a high priority on efficient prey capture and energy conservation Chapters on energy efficiency mechanoreception chemoreception and vision reveal the extraordinary adaptations necessary for success Accounts of the effector systems involved in colour camouflage and bioluminescence heighten the concept of a different world A chapter on animal life styles emphasizes the links between size sex and seasonality visible in the contrasting benefits of gigantism dwarf males and the ability to respond to a periodic influx of food from the surface The final chapter and appendix deal with the unique and exciting variety of life in the deep ocean formalized as biodiversity Its different expression on the sea floor and in midwater invites both comparisons with the rain forest and concerns about its fragility taking the reader back to the emphasis in the first chapter on how little we still know about this critical habitat The Biology of the Deep Ocean complements the two companion volumes on the biology of littoral and estuarine habitats and is designed to be accessible to all marine scientists student and professional topographic features e.g. oceanic seamounts. Many deep sea fish are long lived, slow growing and mature at a relatively old age. The low resilience and high vulnerability of these species means that individual marine sectors and the cumulative impact of human activities can adversely affect fish populations for whom fisheries management is regulated by deep sea regional fisheries management organizations (RFMOs). A desk study to screen and scope marine sectors in a timeframe up to 2050 revealed varying impacts on deep sea fish, deep sea habitats, deep sea food webs upon which the fish depend and/or deep sea fishers.
