The fact that Moscow is no longer the acknowledged leader of the World Communist movement was first evident at the Spring 1969 World Communist conference.

China, N. Vietnam, North Korea and Yugoslavia boycotted the conference entirely. Cuba refused to appear. And in the period that followed up, some were so dependent on Moscow that they would fight for their own liberation if the Kremlin ordered it. Others took an interest that was closer to their own liberation, and all the independence in the party. Soviet influence was fading. What happens in the World Communist movement next?
