Communities and the Environment Arun Agrawal, Clark C. Gibson, 2001 For years environmentalists thought natural resources could be best protected by national legislation But the poor outcomes of this top down policy have led conservation professionals today to regard local communities as the agents of conservation efforts According to a recent survey more than fifty countries report that they pursue partnerships with local communities in an effort to protect their forests Despite the recent popularity of a community based approach the concept of community rarely receives the attention it should get from those concerned with resource management This balanced volume redresses the situation demonstrating both the promise and the potential dangers of community action Although the contributors advocate community based conservation they examine the record with a critical eye They pay attention to the concrete political contexts in which communities emerge and operate Understanding the nature of community requires understanding the internal politics of local regions and their relationship to external forces and actors Especially critical are issues related to ethnicity gender and the state

Indigenous and Local Communities and Protected Areas Grazia Borrini, Ashish Kothari, Gonzalo Oviedo, 2004 Conventional approaches to managing protected areas have often seen people and nature as separate entities

They preclude human communities from using natural resources and assume that their concerns are incompatible with conservation Protected area approaches and models that see conservation as compatible with human communities are explored The main themes are co managed protected areas and community conserved areas Practical guidance is offered drawing on recent experience reflections and advice developed at the local national regional and international level

Conservation with Communities Strategy New Zealand. Department of Conservation,2003 Nature-Friendly Communities Chris Duerksen,Cara Snyder,2013-04-09 Nature Friendly Communities presents an authoritative and readable overview of the successful approaches to protecting biodiversity and natural areas in America s growing communities Addressing the crucial issues of sprawl open space and political realities Chris Duerksen and Cara Snyder explain the most effective steps that communities can take to protect nature The book documents the broad range of benefits including economic impacts resulting from comprehensive biodiversity protection efforts identifies and disseminates information on replicable best community practices establishes benchmarks for evaluating community biodiversity protection programs Nine comprehensive case studies of communities explain how nature protection programs have been implemented From Austin and Baltimore to Tucson and Minneapolis the authors explore how different cities and counties have taken bold steps to successfully protect natural areas Examining program structure and administration land acquisition strategies and sources of funding habitat restoration programs social impacts education efforts and overall results these case studies lay out perfect examples that other communities can easily follow Among the case study sites are Sanibel Island Florida Austin Texas Baltimore County Maryland Charlotte Harbor Florida and Teton County Wyoming Nature Friendly Communities offers a useful overview of the increasing number of communities that have established successful nature protection programs and the significant benefits those programs provide It is an important new work for public officials community activists and anyone concerned with understanding or implementing local or regional biodiversity protection efforts Communities in Transition: Protected Nature and Local People in Eastern and Central Europe Saska Petrova,2016-05-23 The role of local people in contemporary nature conservation practices is often poorly understood or neglected This book therefore examines questions of local participation at the nature society nexus within national parks in the transitional context of Central and Eastern Europe CEE The post 1990 reconfiguration of conservation paradigms in this part of the world has re opened various age old debates about the protection and administration of natural heritage Further complicating the situation has been the introduction of market based principles which has embedded the entire process in broader dynamics of neoliberalization and the capitalist space economy Providing an integrated perspective on why how and for whom nature conservation practices have been implemented in CEE this book sheds further light upon the mechanisms through which such practices both redefine and are affected by the everyday life of people living in national parks Offering a critical global review of the environmental motivations and power interests behind the creation of national parks as well as a typology of the relations between local people and the dynamics of nature protection in them this work challenges the dichotomy between developed and developing countries that pervades much of the academic literature on nature protection Author Saska Petrova highlights the lessons that can be learnt by applying the experiences of local community participation in environmental management in CEE to other locations undergoing major systemic change in their environmental governance practices such as the low carbon transition that is currently unfolding at a global scale

Conservation Communities Edward McMahon, 2014-02 Practical how to information for conservation minded urban planning professionals is provided in this invaluable guide The importance of natural lands or open space in master planned communities either in the suburbs or on the edge of existing cities is thoroughly explained and coupled with examples of conservation oriented housing developments that incorporate this key component

Balancing Nature and Commerce in Gateway Communities Jim Howe, Edward T. McMahon, Luther Propst, 1997 Increasing numbers of Americans are fleeing cities and suburbs for the small towns and open spaces that surround national and state parks wildlife refuges historic sites and other public lands With their scenic beauty and high quality of life these gateway communities have become a magnet for those looking to escape the congestion and fast tempo of contemporary American society Yet without savvy planning gateway communities could easily meet the same fate as the suburban communities that were the promised land of an earlier generation This volume can help prevent that from happening The authors offer practical and proven lessons on how residents of gateway communities can protect their community's identity while stimulating a healthy economy and safeguarding nearby natural and historic resources They describe economic development strategies land use planning processes and conservation tools that communities from all over the country have found effective Each strategy or process is explained with specific examples and numerous profiles and case studies clearly demonstrate how different communities have coped with the challenges of growth and development Among the cities profiled are Boulder Colorado Townsend and Pittman Center Tennessee Gettysburg Pennsylvania Tyrrell County North Carolina Jackson Hole Wyoming Sanibel Island Florida Calvert County Maryland Tuscon Arizona and Mount Desert Island Maine Balancing Nature and Commerce in Gateway Communities provides important lessons in how to preserve the character and integrity of communities and landscapes without sacrificing local economic well being It is an important resource for planners developers local officials and concerned citizens working to retain the high quality of life and natural beauty of these cities and towns

Our Forest, Your Ecosystem, Their Timber Nicholas K. Menzies, 2007-05-15 Community based forest management CBFM is a model of forest management in which a community takes part in decision making and implementation and monitoring of activities affecting the natural resources around them CBFM provides a framework for a community members to secure access to the products and services that flow from the landscape in which they live and has become an essential component of any comprehensive approach to forest management In this volume Nicholas K Menzies looks at communities in China Zanzibar Brazil and India where despite differences in landscape climate politics and culture common challenges and themes arise in making a transition from forest management by government agencies to CBFM The stories of these four distinct places highlight the difficulties communities face when trying to manage their forests and negotiate partnerships with others interested in forest management such as the commercial forest sector or conservation and environmental organizations These issues are then considered against a growing body of research concerning what constitutes successful CBFM Drawing on published and unpublished case studies project reports and his own rich experience Menzies analyzes how CBFM fits into the broader picture of the management of natural resources highlighting the conditions that bring about effective practices and the most just and equitable stewardship of resources A critical companion for students researchers and practitioners Our Forest Your Ecosystem Their Timber provides a singular resource on the emergence and evolution of CBFM
