

Boiling Point Elevation and Freezing Point Depression

The lower vapor pressure of the solution causes an increase in the boiling point because the temperature required to equal the vapor pressure to the atmospheric pressure is greater than what it is for the solvent.

Liquid-solid transition is associated with entropy decrease since a less disordered state is formed. To drive this unfavorable transition, energy must be removed from the system. And this energy is higher for the freezing of solution since it has a higher entropy. Therefore, the solution has a lower freezing point than its solvent.
