Christina Lupton,2018-08-15 How did eighteenth century readers find and make time to read Books have always posed a problem of time for readers Becoming widely available in the eighteenth century when working hours increased and lighter and quicker forms of reading newspapers magazines broadsheets surged in popularity the material form of the codex book invited readers to situate themselves creatively in time Drawing on letters diaries reading logs and a range of eighteenth and early nineteenth century novels Christina Lupton s Reading and the Making of Time in the Eighteenth Century concretely describes how book readers of the past carved up expanded and anticipated time Placing canonical works by Elizabeth Inchbald Henry Fielding Amelia Opie and Samuel Richardson alongside those of lesser known authors and readers Lupton approaches books as objects that are good at attracting particular forms of attention and paths of return In contrast to the digital interfaces of our own

moment and the ephemeral newspapers and pamphlets read in the 1700s books are rarely seen as shaping or keeping modern time However as Lupton demonstrates books are often put down and picked up they are leafed through as well as read sequentially and they are handed on as objects designed to bridge temporal distances In showing how discourse itself engages with these material practices Lupton argues that reading is something to be studied textually as well as historically Applying modern theorists such as Niklas Luhmann Bruno Latour and Bernard Stiegler Lupton offers a rare phenomenological approach to the study of a concrete historical field This compelling book stands out for the combination of archival research smart theoretical inquiry and autobiographical reflection it brings into play

The Oxford Handbook of the Eighteenth-Century Novel J. A. Downie, 2016-07-21 Although the emergence of the English novel is generally regarded as an eighteenth century phenomenon this is the first book to be published professing to cover the eighteenth century English novel in its entirety This Handbook surveys the development of the English novel during the long eighteenth century in other words from the later seventeenth century right through to the first three decades of the nineteenth century when with the publication of the novels of Jane Austen and Walter Scott the novel finally gained critical acceptance and assumed the position of cultural hegemony it enjoyed for over a century By situating the novels of the period which are still read today against the background of the hundreds published between 1660 and 1830 this Handbook not only covers those masters and mistresses of early prose fiction such as Defoe Richardson Fielding Sterne Burney Scott and Austen who are still acknowledged to be seminal figures in the emergence and development of the English novel but also the significant number of recently rediscovered novelists who were popular in their own day At the same time its comprehensive coverage of cultural contexts not considered by any existing study but which are central to the emergence of the novel such as the book trade and the mechanics of book production copyright and censorship the growth of the reading public the economics of culture both in London and in the provinces and the re printing of popular fiction after 1774 offers unique insight into the making of the English novel The Journal of English and Germanic Philology ,1905 The Major Dramas of Richard Brinsley Sheridan Richard Brinsley Sheridan,1906 Recovering an Eighteenth Century Text Cynthia Booth Ricciardi,2003 The novel of sentiment and the Gothic romance Ernest Albert Baker,1929
