

DIFFERENT LANDFORMS

CHART

Archipelago
An archipelago is a group or chain of islands clustered together in a sea or ocean. Many archipelagos are formed through volcanic activity. But some archipelagos can also be created by erosion, or when sea levels fall to expose underlying rock formations. Other parts related to archipelagos are coral reefs and atolls. The Hawaiian Islands, the Philippines, and the Azores are all archipelagos. The world's largest archipelago is the Malay chain of Indonesia, which stretches 3,500 miles and includes more than 17,000 islands.

Canyon
A canyon is a deep valley with very steep sides. It often carved from the Earth by a river. A canyon has high walls and sometimes a river flows at the bottom. Canyons are much more common in arid areas than in humid areas because weathering has a greater effect in arid areas.

Lake
A lake is a large body of water surrounded by land on all sides. Rivers, huge waves, or other natural events can create lakes. Lakes can be shallow or deep. The Great Salt Lake is the largest lake in the world.

Plateau
A plateau is a large, flat area of land that is higher than the surrounding land. Plateaus form either when mountains get worn down or their tops are cut off, or when a large portion of the earth is pushed up from the Earth's interior. Plateaus are common in the western United States. The Colorado Plateau is a large plateau in the western United States.

Mountain Range
A mountain is a piece on the Earth's surface that is much higher than the land around it. It is a very high, rugged piece of land. Mountains are often found in chains. Mountain ranges are usually separated from other mountain ranges by plains and rivers. The Himalayas are the highest mountain range in the world.

Strait
A strait is a narrow body of water between two landmasses or a smaller island from a larger body of water. Straits are important for shipping and trade. They are also important for the environment. The Strait of Gibraltar is a strait between the Iberian Peninsula and North Africa.

Peninsula
A peninsula is a strip of land that is surrounded by water on three sides. Usually, there is a narrow isthmus, or "neck," that connects it to the main body of land. The Florida Peninsula is a peninsula in the United States.

River
A river is a large, flowing body of water that usually empties into a larger body of water. Rivers usually flow from mountains or hills down to the sea. Rivers are important for drinking water, agriculture, and transportation. The Nile River is one of the longest rivers in the world.

Delta
A delta is a low, wetland land formed at the mouth of a river. It is formed from the soil, sand, and silt carried down the river and deposited at the delta. A delta is often shaped like a triangle (hence the name, delta). A delta is often found in areas where the river meets the sea.

Glacier
A glacier is a large, slow-moving mass of ice. It can take a year to move an inch or so. Glaciers are formed from snow and ice that has accumulated over a long period of time. Glaciers are found in mountain ranges and in the Arctic and Antarctic regions.

Valley
A valley is a lowland area between higher lands, such as mountains. It is surrounded on two or more sides by mountains. A valley is often formed by a river or stream. The Grand Valley is a valley in the United States.

Desert
A desert is a very dry area with little or no rain. It is an area with little precipitation or where the water that does fall is lost quickly. Deserts are found in many parts of the world. The Sahara Desert is the largest desert in the world.

Volcano
A volcano is a mountain or hill formed around a crack in the Earth's crust. When a volcano erupts, it spews out lava, ash, and hot gases. Volcanoes are found in many parts of the world. Mount Fuji is a volcano in Japan.

Basin
A basin is a low area of land that is lower at the center than at the edges. It is often formed by erosion. Basins are found in many parts of the world. The Amazon Basin is a basin in South America.

Island
An island is a piece of land surrounded by water. Many islands are in the ocean. There is even a small island in the Arctic region. Islands are formed in many ways, including volcanic activity, erosion, and coral reefs. The Hawaiian Islands are a chain of islands in the Pacific Ocean.
