echoing the feelings of the 13th Century Mongol General Sabutai whose cavalry travelled 180 miles in 3 days to surprise and annihilate the Hungarian Army Demonstrating the importance of efficient military transport the Mongols relied on a system of 3 extra horses for every man but the modern military commander has far more resources to draw upon From the American airlift of 7 000 men and 3 000 tons of material during the Cuban missile crisis to the Marine troop carriers which airlifted an entire bridge to their beleaguered troops transportation is as vital to military success now as it was for Alexander the Great Hannibal or Genghis Kahn In Arteries of War the author traces the development of military transportation from the time of Alexander the Great to the present day His book provides a fascinating account of the different types of transport that have been used over the centuries He begins with the camels and elephants used by Alexander the Great and goes on to write about the use of horses ships railways aircraft and helicopters he goes on to trace the development of military dependency on commercial interests from the days when commanders bought rented or stole animals to the present day reliance on airlines and the merchant marine with its use of containerisation The book contains many previously unpublished photographs and fills an important gap in the study of military transport Front flap of book jacket The Soviet Air Forces Paul J. Report of a Workshop on Expanding U.S. Air Force Noncombat Mission Capabilities Carl H. Builder,1993 This report describes a workshop held in June 1992 on expanding U S Air Force noncombat mission capabilities

The major result of the workshop was the unexpected highlighting of a division among the participants about whether noncombat missions should become an integral part of Air Force capabilities and whether they would seriously degrade U S combat capabilities Related issues were whether Air Force noncombat activities could be carried out by nonmilitary organizations and whether efforts to enhance Air Force noncombat support capabilities may be regarded as only a means of obtaining a larger share of the military budget The participants did however identify some noncombat capabilities likely to be needed adequate infrastructure in remote areas improved command control communications and intelligence capabilities in remote areas and for coordinating with local authorities and psychological and civil affairs capabilities where a knowledge of indigenous culture as well as language is important AIAA/AHS/ASEE Aircraft Design, Systems and Operations Conference ,1989 The Modern War Machine Philip Jarrett,2000 Examines how airfare requirements have evolved since WWII and how air power has contributed to military needs Forthcoming Books Rose Army,1990 Government Reports Annual Index ,1990 Civilian and Military Means of Providing and Supporting Humanitarian Assistance During Conflict DAC Task Force on Conflict, Peace, and Development Co-operation,Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development.
