Life of the Past George Gaylord Simpson, 1960      An Introduction to Palaeontology Arthur Morley Davies, 1947 This work has been selected by scholars as being culturally important and is part of the knowledge base of civilization as we know it. This work is in the public domain in the United States of America and possibly other nations. Within the United States you may freely copy and distribute this work as no entity individual or corporate has a copyright on the body of the work. Scholars believe and we concur that this work is important enough to be preserved, reproduced, and made generally available to the public. To ensure a quality reading experience, this work has been proofread and republished using a format that seamlessly blends the original graphical elements with text in an easy-to-read typeface. We appreciate your support of the preservation process and thank you for being an important part of keeping this knowledge alive and relevant.      An Introduction to Palaeontology, 1947      An Introduction to Palaeontology Arthur Morley Davies, 1920      An Introduction to Palaeontology Arthur Morley Davies, 1951      An Introduction to Palaeontology (Classic Reprint) Arthur Morley Davies, 2017-10-17 Excerpt from An Introduction to Palaeontology: My ideal, not always attained, has been in treating each great group of fossils first to describe with some fulness a few common species from which an idea of the general characters and range of variation may be obtained, and then to give a brief systematic account of the group. The reader should not be satisfied unless he actually handles the selected species and compares them point by point with the description. When he cannot obtain the actual species described, he should take the nearest allied form accessible and determine precisely how it differs from that described. Only by such definite practical work can he begin to qualify himself to become a palaeontologist. The writing of this book was begun in 1913 and interrupted for nearly four years by pressure of war work. It was at first intended that it should be illustrated by original drawings of fossils, and a certain number of such drawings were made before the war from specimens in the collection of the Imperial College. I have to record my grateful thanks to the Governors of the Imperial College and Professor Watts for permission for the use of these specimens, and to Mr F G Percival, the artist. Subsequently it became evident that to continue this method of illustration would delay the work too much, and that for the purposes of the book, diagrammatic copies of figures in standard monographs would be equally useful. I have to thank Miss L Lyle and my wife for these later figures, about four-fifths of the total. About the Publisher: Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books. Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com. This book is a reproduction of an important historical work. Forgotten Books uses state-of-the-art technology to digitally reconstruct the work, preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy.
