Building Community Capacity:

Building Community Capacity for Tourism Development Gianna Moscardo, 2008 A lack of entrepreneurial capacity limited understanding of tourism markets and a lack of community understanding of tourism and its impacts have been identified as barriers to effective tourism development in peripheral regions This book will provide a focused academic analysis of this emerging issue within tourism development practice while critically examining the dimensions and processes of building community capacity to manage and develop a tourism industry

Building Community Capacity Robert J. Chaskin, This book focuses on a gap in current social work practice theory community change Much work in this area of macro practice particularly around grassroots community organizing has a somewhat dated feel to it is highly ideological in orientation or suffers from superficiality particularly in the area of theory and practical application Set against the context of an often narrowly constructed clinical emphasis on practice education coupled with social work's own current rendering of scientific management community practice often takes second or third billing in many professional curricula despite its deep roots in the overall field of social welfare Drawing on extensive case study data from three significant community building initiatives program data from numerous other community capacity building efforts key informant interviews and an excellent literature review Chaskin and his colleagues draw implications for crafting community change strategies as well as for creating and sustaining the organizational infrastructure necessary to support them The authors bring to bear the perspectives of a variety of professional disciplines including sociology urban planning psychology and social work Building Community Capacity takes a collaborative interdisciplinary approach to a subject of wide and current concern the role of neighborhood and community structures in the delivery of human services or as the authors put it a place where programs and problems can be fitted together Social work scholars and students of community practice seeking new conceptual frameworks and insights from research to inform novel community interventions will find much of value in Building Community Capacity

Building Community Capacity, 2015 Increasing Community Engagement Through Community Capacity Building Jasmine Cadena, 2021 The complex problems that affect communities need community driven solutions Therefore community engagement is essential in policy and public administration The San Fernando Valley has programs focused on building stronger communities and families by building their capacity This study aims to evaluate to what extent existing capacity building efforts are effective at increasing community engagement This quantitative study is comprised of 100 participants from the Building Stronger Families BSF program A survey was provided to measure community capacity pre and post involvement with the BSF program The researcher expects to find a positive correlation between capacity building and community engagement Policy recommendations for public sector organizations include a higher emphasis on building skills of residents so that they may meaningfully participate in community wide matters

Vollbrecht, Tracey Weiler, Kirsten A. Porter-Stransky, 2025-10-13 Outreach and service learning to elementary and secondary schools and community organizations that serve under represented groups URM and under represented minority URM demographics has long been a focus of pre clinical and clinical health professions education institutions to improve individual and health related self efficacy When health pre professional and professional students teach correct science technology engineering math and medicine STEMM principles to youth they help to improve the health related self efficacy and cultural competency of individuals and the community Service learning is an extension of outreach efforts defined broadly by different accreditation councils as educational experiences in which students purposefully prepare and provide service to the community followed by a reflection on the experience Together outreach and service learning are excellent opportunities for professional pathway students to inspire the next generation of elementary and secondary school children to develop evidence based health related self efficacy and an interest in STEMM careers Building Community Capacity Rosemary

M. Caron, Joav Merrick, 2014-05-14 We know that taking steps now to prevent disease before it starts is crucial to keeping people healthier living longer and reducing health care costs Yet health systems around the globe continue to focus more attention and devote enormous resources on medical services to treat illnesses and injuries after the fact rather than taking steps to prevent them from occurring in the first place Each of the articles presented in this book are examples of innovative community efforts that take a step back from the common practice of merely treating medical conditions and instead implement effective prevention strategies that address the underlying conditions that lead to death illness injury and health inequities This book provides a glimpse into some public health prevention projects being carried out in diverse communities around the globe Each chapter offers details about a unique problem faced within a community the prevention strategies and partnerships that were developed and the results that were achieved Social Science to Improve Fuels Management

, 2005 Olympic Reform Ten Years Later Heather Dichter, Bruce Kidd, 2013-09-13 In 1999 the International Olympic Committee approved far reaching reforms to the appointment and terms of its members the selection of host cities for the Olympic and Winter Olympic Games the events on the Olympic Program and the reporting of decisions and financial information The reforms were initiated in response to the deep crises of legitimacy it faced because of the Salt Lake City doping scandal and ongoing accusations that it turned a blind eye to doping This book assesses the implementation and effectiveness of those reforms ten years after It draws upon the perspectives of Olympic scholars Olympic athletes and IOC members including those who were directly involved in the reform process and makes a number of recommendations about how the process of Olympic reform could be maintained and strengthened As such it provides an insightful and telling report card on the modern Olympic Movement in the first decade of the 21st century and the presidency of Jacques Rogge This book

Community Capacity Building, Community Development and Health Richard James Phillips, Amanda Amos, Lyn Tett, Emma Witney, 2007 This research project aimed to further knowledge regarding the relationship between community capacity building CCB community development and health within the context of the Health Issues in the Community HIIC programme CCB refers to the development of capabilities to identify and address community issues and was conceptualised using four dimensions participation resource mobilisation links with others and role of outside agents HIIC is a learning resource supported by NHS Health Scotland the national health promotion agency The main objective of HIIC is to help students explore the processes involved in tackling health related concerns in the community The main concepts in this study were explored by referring to a range of academic literatures and five research questions were formulated How did HIIC tutors and students understand the concept of community and was this understanding influenced by completing HIIC How did stakeholders and tutors understand the notion of CCB Was CCB evident in the experiences of the students after their involvement with the course Did participating in the HIIC course contribute towards furthering students understanding about health and Did participating in HIIC have any other impact on participants Face to face semi structured interviews were conducted across Scotland with three participant groups stakeholders tutors and students This involved a total of thirtyfive interviews with students and tutors from eleven different courses Interviews were transcribed and analysed using thematic analysis Four key themes emerged community CCB health and impact of learning Tutors and students suggested that people could be members of multiple communities Community was understood as a geographical location a common interest and as a sense of belonging Tutors also considered the community as a site of professional practice Some participants had an expectation that community members should act collectively to help one another Completing HIIC appeared to influence students understanding about their own circumstances issues within their community and how it functions rather than informing how they defined the concept of community CCB was seen by tutors as a process that develops competencies to address community issues Stakeholders and tutors differed in their views about whether CCB was an individual level or a collective process Participants likened CCB to community development but stakeholders questioned if it shared the same value base or if it was an outcome of community development Tutors expressed a range of opinions about their understanding of CCB It was viewed as a potentially helpful idea in terms of understanding the work of community health based practitioners However others were unable to give a definition of CCB and some tutors considered CCB a concept with little meaning or an indicator to fulfil in the context of a funding application The manifestation of individual aspects of CCB were identified in the accounts of some participants but the data did not support the contention that HIIC promoted CCB within the timescale of this study although it could be argued that latent CCB was developed The data did indicate that participants understanding about the concept of health was reaffirmed broadened or changed and that participating in HIIC could increase an individual s awareness of social and health issues develop interpersonal skills and widen social networks This study indicated that by exploring the concepts of CCB community and health a contribution was made towards understanding the processes by which participating in a HIIC course influenced students to address health related concerns Building Community Capacity Steven E. Mayer,1994

Building Community Linda Beilharz,2002 This ground breaking book documents a radically different and very successful approach to community capacity building that builds on the strengths inherent in the community rather than focusing on its perceived deficits In the Shared Action project the people of the community were approached as the experts in their lives and it is they who defined the goals and drove the activities This book rigorously captures well referenced research every step of this challenging journey and the voices of all stakeholders
