Jongdeok Choi, 1989 Abstract This thesis describes the design and implementation of an integrated debugging system for parallel programs running on shared memory multi processors The goal of the debugging system is to present to the programmer a graphical view of the dynamic program dependences while keeping the execution time overhead low We first describe the use of flowback analysis to provide information on causal relationship between events in a program's execution without re-executing the entire program for debugging Execution time overhead is kept low by recording only a small amount of trace during a program's execution We use semantic analysis and a technique called incremental tracing to keep the time and space overhead low As part of the semantic analysis we use a static program dependence graph structure that reduces the amount of work done at compile time and takes advantage of the dynamic information produced during execution time

Issues in Debugging Sequential and Concurrent Programs Wingshun Wilson Ho, 1992 Logic Programming and Its Applications Michel van Caneghem, David H. D. Warren, 1986 Logic programming is an emerging approach to computer science where programs are viewed as sets of logical axioms and computation is viewed as carefully controlled logical deduction The approach currently finds practical realization in the programming language PROLOG This volume contains details of research in the field with a special emphasis on applications including expert systems natural language parsing and analysis database management and knowledge acquisition circuit analysis and hardware verification
