Double Expresso:

The Homecoming Janice Cairns,2026-01-30 Selling Larkdale Hall seemed the right remedy for the escalating troubles of the Heriots However stepping towards their independent lives not knowing what was going to happen seemed only to exacerbate tensions amongst them Their initial troubles intensified their woes worsened causing them to fall into deeper and more serious difficulties Charles Heriot once a pillar of society becomes unrecognisable to all who knew him This respectable and revered man turns into a low down drunken adulterer And only a miracle could patch up his awkward estrangement from the lovely Clarinda who is dumbstruck and bewildered by his behaviour Then Haydon He imagined he had found some paradise with Rowena only to find he had married a woman with a trail of debts following her Now he truly knows the meaning of money worries He is at the end of his tether not only for himself and Rowena but also for Bertie Betsy and their newborn baby Their lives are an utter shambles It is not plain sailing for Matilda and Leyton either She does love Leyton but finds him extremely insensitive at times Her feelings get hurt she becomes exasperated by things he says At times being with him is something of a labour Then he loses his job at Larkdale Hall where he had been retained when Richard Heriot sold the house To make matters worse Matilda must come to terms with not being a mother She had not bargained on not getting pregnant All in all the Heriots were going through hell Now this family is not only fragmented and fragile but also a family on the cusp of destruction However Richard Heriot did have a plan He believed his wonderful plan could be the magic key to saving his family But would his fantastic idea be the final solution for his beloved family Only time would tell The CS
