The Dilemma of Freedom and Foreknowledge Linda Trinkaus Zagzebski, 1996-04-25 This original analysis examines the three leading traditional solutions to the dilemma of divine foreknowledge and human free will those arising from Boethius from Ockham and from Molina Though all three solutions are rejected in their best known forms three new solutions are proposed and Zagzebski concludes that divine foreknowledge is compatible with human freedom The discussion includes the relation between the foreknowledge dilemma and problems about the nature of time and the causal relation the logic of counterfactual conditionals and the differences between divine and human knowing states An appendix introduces a new foreknowledge dilemma that purports to show that omniscient foreknowledge conflicts with deep intuitions about temporal asymmetry quite apart from considerations of free will Zagzebski shows that only a narrow range of solutions can handle this new dilemma A compelling contribution to the field The Dilemma of Freedom and Foreknowledge will appeal to students and scholars of theistic philosophy and the philosophy of religion

Divine Foreknowledge and Necessity In-Kyu Song, 2002 The omniscience of God poses problems for the concept of free will that has occupied philosophers for centuries Song systematic theology Hapdong Theological Seminary South Korea presents an argument for the presence of free will based on the distinction between hard and soft facts proposed by 14th century theologian and philosopher William of Ockham He suggests that God s knowledge of any particular act is a soft fact that is dependent on the performance of that act itself God s knowledge of an act only becomes true if that act is performed This characteristic of God s knowledge as Ockhamist soft fact is what allows for human freedom of action
