Animal consciousness: exploring theoretical, methodological and ethical issues Antonino Raffone, Günter Ehret, 2026-03-17

The study of animal consciousness is a burgeoning field that intersects various disciplines including psychology, neuroscience, ethology, philosophy, and ecology. Despite significant advancements, the understanding of consciousness in non-human animals remains a complex and debated topic. Current research has raised questions about the meaningfulness of the term consciousness when applied to animals, the methodological challenges in studying it, and the ethical implications of such research. Recent studies have provided insights into the neural correlates of consciousness, the contextual and task-dependent nature of animal awareness, and the evolutionary and ecological significance of consciousness in different species. However, there remains a substantial gap in comprehensively understanding how consciousness manifests across diverse animal taxa and the broader implications of these findings. Addressing these gaps is crucial for advancing our knowledge and fostering ethical considerations in the study of animal consciousness. This research topic aims to explore the theoretical, methodological, and ethical issues surrounding animal consciousness. The primary objectives include examining the meaningfulness of the term consciousness in animals, identifying effective methodological approaches for its study, and understanding the ecological and evolutionary implications of consciousness. Additionally, the research will delve into the ethical considerations that arise from studying consciousness in non-human animals. By addressing these questions, the research aims to contribute to a more nuanced and comprehensive understanding of animal consciousness. To gather further insights into the complexities of animal consciousness, we welcome articles addressing, but not limited to, the following themes:
