Material Geographies of Household Sustainability Andrew Gorman-Murray,2016-05-13 Charting new research directions this book constructs a series of imperatives for linking culturally informed research around household sustainability with policy and planning The household or home is a critical scale for understanding activities that connect individual behaviours and societal attitudes The focus on the household in this collection provides a window into the sheer diversity of homemaking and maintenance activities that entail resource use These practices have affective or emotive dimensions as well as habitual aspects Diversity innovation and change at the household scale is often missed in policy approaches which assume that simplistic economic motivations drive demand and this can in turn be managed through regulation or market pricing The research challenge extends beyond describing existing unsustainable economies driving resource intensive behaviour to consider realistic options for transformations in cultural practices material relationships and ultimately the political economies they sit within Without change in these systems government initiatives to promote ecological modernisation run the risk of simply green washing the very economies of consumption that currently drive unsustainable practices Social and cultural change at the household level is critical to promoting sustainability at a range of wider scales El-Hi Textbooks & Serials in Print, 2005 ,2005 Electronic Waste Pollution Muhammad Zaffar Hashmi,Ajit Varma,2019-11-09 Electronic and electric waste e waste defined as end of life electronic products including computers television sets mobile phones transformers capacitors wires and cables are a major global environmental concern The crude recycling of e waste releases persistent toxic substances such as heavy metals polybrominated diphenyl ethers PBDEs polychlorinated dibenzodioxins PCDDs polychlorinated dibenzofurans PCDFs polycyclic aromatic hydrocarbons PAHs and polychlorinated biphenyls PCBs and the environmental pollution and health risks caused by the improper disposal of e waste has become an urgent issue This book offers an overview of e waste history sources and entry routes in soil air water and sediment It also addresses e waste transport and fate bioavailability and biomonitoring e waste risk assessment impacts on the environment and public health In addition it discusses the impact of e waste on soil microbial community diversity structure and function and reviews the treatment and management strategies such as bioremediation and phytoremediation as well as policies and future challenges Given its scope it is a valuable resource for students researchers and scholars in the field of electronics manufacturing environmental science and engineering toxicology environmental biotechnology soil sciences and microbial ecology as well as and plant biotechnology Social Contracts and Informal Workers in the Global South Alfars, Laura,Chen, Martha,Plagerson, Sophie,2022-06-10 This is an open access title available under the terms of a CC BY NC ND 4 0 License It is free to read download and share on Elgaronline Illustrating how current social contracts may be considered inadequate

irrelevant or unjust Social Contracts and Informal Workers in the Global South draws on the accounts of informal workers to advocate for radically new conceptualizations of state society capital labour and state capital labour relations characterised by recognition responsiveness and reciprocity Access to Employment Services Under the Workforce Investment Act Mary Schuring,2000 Biochemistry of Biochemical Recycling Cass Biles,2025 Plastic waste is one of the leading environmental issues of our time With an increasing demand for plastic worldwide carbon emissions and waste products are projected to skyrocket leading to accumulations of plastic in landfills and oceans Current recycling methods are limited and even methods for highly recyclable plastics such as polyethylene terephthalate PET are far from achieving a circular plastics economy This thesis addresses the emergence of bacteria capable of degrading PET waste and aims to explore the biochemical mechanisms behind these degradation pathways Pseudomonas sp B10 has been shown to produce PETase EstB and putative MHETase NlhH which are theorized to work in a two step mechanism towards the degradation of PET into monomer components TPA and EG With the right optimization of these enzymes bacteria could be utilized to harvest and re polymerize these monomers into recycled PET Based on prior work in the Mellies lab I sought to characterize putative MHETase NlhH and achieve a high resolution structural model for EstB with the ultimate goal of improving these enzymes efficiency and thermal stability NlhH was successfully expressed and purified as a soluble protein in this study but MHETase activity was not shown as incubation of NlhH with BHET failed to free TPA and EG An EstB crystal was successfully reproduced in lab indicating promise for future structural studies Further analysis of the structure of these proteins and their interactions with subsequent substrates is essential towards the development of efficient and industry level biochemical recycling methods a model which may be essential to the future of plastic production and waste management Bowker's Complete Video Directory ,2000
