

SECONDARY DEVIANCE

Secondary deviance is a stage of deviance from the labeling theory of deviance in which a person internalizes the labels applied to them by society.

COMPARISON

Primary deviance

Temporary deviant behavior. When someone violates social norms without internalizing the belief that they are 'bad'.

Secondary deviance

Permanently labelled as a deviant person. This occurs when someone internalizes the label society has given them, so they go on misbehaving because that's what they see as their role in society.

EXAMPLES

1. If you label a child as unintelligent, they may come to see themselves as unintelligent and therefore not put much effort into their school work.
2. If you label a child a bully, they may come to see themselves as bullies and continue to do the bullying.
