Rachel S Tattersall

Algeria In Others Languages:

Algeria in Others' Languages Anne-Emmanuelle Berger, 2002 For decades the superimposition of languages in Algeria has had growing cultural and political consequences The relations between identity and language already complicated before independence became all the more entangled after 1962 when the new state imposed standard Arabic as the sole national language The vernacular brand of Arabic spoken by the majority of the population as well as Berber spoken by an important minority were denied legitimacy Moreover French the colonial language continued to be important all the while that its position changed The violence that ensued in the late 1980s cannot be fully understood without considering the politics of language This timely book is devoted to Algeria's linguistic predicament and the underlying disagreements over notions of identity power and belonging What problems arise when a new national language is adopted by a postcolonial state How does the status of the former colonial language change What becomes of the original mother tongue's of the populace The authors of Algeria in Others Languages address these questions as they explore the historical cultural and philosophical significance of language in Algeria and its relation to issues of politics and gender Their topics range from analyses of political violence to the status of the principal of evidence in the legal system to the place of Francophonie in the 1990s The authors represent the fields of literature history sociology sociolinguistics and postcolonial and gender studies some are also historical players in Algeria's linguistic debates Autobiography and Independence Debra Kelly, 2005-01-01

In Autobiography and Independence Debra Kelly examines four accomplished Francophone North African writers Moulan Feroan Assia Djebar Albert Memmi and Abdelkeacute bir Khatibi to illuminate the complex relationship of a writer's work to cultural and national histories The legacies of colonialism and the difficulties of nationalism run throughout all four writers works yet in their striking individuality the four demonstrate the ways in which such heritages are refracted through a writer's personal history This book will be of interest to students of Francophone literature colonialism and African history and culture

Language Conflict and Identity Malaise in Algeria and the Maghreb Abderrezak Dourari, Khaoula Taleb Ibrahimi, 2026-01-29 Many books and articles have been published on the sociolinguistic profile of Algeria and the Maghreb Yet few have ever focused attention on the ideological and identity decisive aspects that underlie and determine the persisting language conflict Based mainly on the macro sociolinguistics methodology this book focuses on questions such as how do the different languages organise their co existence within society How are these languages represented by people and by the State Why did the Maghrebi States try vehemently and time after time to substitute a second language namely Scholarly Arabic less mastered by the elites to French as well as to the first languages throughout the postcolonial period Why has the Algerian State decided recently to substitute Scholarly Arabic and English to French Why has the postcolonial political trend in power mistreated the sociolinguistic manifold reality of these multilingual and multicultural societies Heated debates have also flared recently on the methodology to approach language planning of Tamazight and Algerian or

Maghrebi Arabic upon their respective places in the Maghrebi socio functional space and language market
