

AFRICAN INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Economic Development

- Economic development is a major challenge and focus of African International Relations, with many African states facing poverty, inequality, and underdevelopment.
- African states have pursued various strategies for economic development, including the promotion of trade, investment, and industrialization.
- The African Continental Free Trade Area (AfCFTA) is a recent initiative aimed at promoting economic integration and development on the continent.

Human Security

- Human security refers to the protection and well-being of individuals, as opposed to the traditional focus on state security.
- Human security is a growing concern in African International Relations, with issues such as migration, climate change, and public health posing significant challenges.
- African states and regional organizations have developed strategies for addressing human security, including the African Charter on Human and Peoples' Rights and the African Union's Agenda 2063.

Gender and Social Inclusion

- Gender and social inclusion are important issues in African International Relations, with many African states facing challenges related to gender inequality, discrimination, and exclusion.
- African states and regional organizations have developed policies and frameworks for promoting gender equality and social inclusion, such as the Maputo Protocol and the African Women's Decade.
- Progress on gender and social inclusion in African International Relations is often hindered by cultural and social barriers, as well as political resistance.

Diplomacy and Multilateralism

- Diplomacy and multilateralism are key aspects of African International Relations, with African states engaging in various forms of diplomacy to advance their interests and promote regional cooperation.
- African states also participate in multilateral institutions such as the United Nations and the African Union, where they seek to influence global governance and decision-making.
- Diplomacy and multilateralism in African International Relations can be complicated by power dynamics, conflicting interests, and institutional weaknesses.

African International Relations:

Africa in Global International Relations Paul-Henri Bischoff, Kwesi Aning, Amitav Acharya, 2015-10-05 Recent scholarship in International Relations IR has started to study the meaning and implications of a non Western world With this comes the need for a new paradigm of IR theory that is more global open inclusive and able to capture the voices and experiences of both Western and non Western worlds This book investigates why Africa has been marginalised in IR discipline and theory and how this issue can be addressed in the context of the emerging Global IR paradigm To have relevance for Africa a new IR theory needs to be more inclusive intellectually negotiated and holistically steeped in the African context In this innovative volume each author takes a critical look at existing IR paradigms and offers a unique perspective based on the African experience Following on from Amitav Acharya and Barry Buzan s work Non Western International Relations Theory it develops and advances non Western IR theory and the idea of Global IR This volume will be of key interest to scholars and students of African politics international relations IR theory and comparative politics

Aspects of International Relations in Africa Mark W. DeLancey, 1979 Africa's International Relations Beth Elise Whitaker, John Frank Clark, 2018 Comprehensive and engaging this timely introduction to Africa s international relations explores how power interests and ideas influence interactions both among the continent s states and between African states and other actors in the global arena How has history shaped the international relations of African states and peoples What role does identity play How are foreign policies linked to domestic political dynamics and especially to the pursuit of regime security How are states grappling with the tensions between sovereignty and external pressures These are among the questions answered as the authors address a wide range of ongoing and emerging challenges all in historical and theoretical context In addition a case study at the end of each chapter illustrates key concepts and reflects an ongoing debate The result is an ideal text for students as well as an invaluable resource for researchers and policymakers c From publisher s description

Africa and International Relations in the 21st Century S. Cornelissen, F. Cheru, T. Shaw, 2016-01-26 This book examines key emergent trends related to aspects of power sovereignty conflict peace development and changing social dynamics in the African context It challenges conventional IR precepts of authority politics and society which have proven to be so inadequate in explaining African processes Rather this edited collection analyses the significance of many of the uncharted dimensions of Africa s international relations such as the respatialisation of African societies through migration and the impacts this process has had on state power the various ways in which both formal and informal authority and economies are practised and the dynamics and impacts of new transnational social movements on African politics Finally attention is paid to Africa s place in a shifting global order and the implications for African international relations of the emergence of new world powers and or alliances This edition includes a new preface by the editors which brings the findings of the book up to date and analyses the changes that are likely to impact upon global governance and human development in policy and practice in
