Postgate, 2012-12-06 Understanding of biological nitrogen fixation has advanced with impressive rapidity during the last decade As befits a developing area of Science these advances have uncovered information and raised questions which will have and indeed have had repercussions in numerous other branches of science and its applications This information explosion to use one of today s cant idioms was initiated by the discovery by a group of scientists working in the Central Research laboratories of Dupont de Nemours U S A of a reproducibly active cell free enzyme preparation from a nitrogen fixing bacterium Full credit is due to them But subsequent developments albeit sometimes quite as impressive have too often been marked by that familiar disorder of a developing field of research the scramble to publish It is a scramble which at its best may represent a laudable desire to inform colleagues of the latest developments yet which too easily develops into an undignified rush for priority wherewith to impress one s Board of Directors or Grant giving

Institution This in miniature is the tragedy of scientific research to day desire for credit causes research to be published in little bulletins notes and preliminary communications so that only those intimately involved in the field really know what is happening and even they may well not see the forest for the trees Those outside the field or working in peripheral areas may glean something of what is going on from reviews and fragments presented at meetings but the broad pattern of development is often elusive Automobile Trade Journal ,1912 American Cabinetmaker and Upholsterer ,1927
