Traps Embraced Or Escaped Carl Mosk, 2011 This book explores economic development in East Asia between 1870 and 1953 in terms of escaping or succumbing to four interrelated traps demographic political economic and cultural Demographic traps include Malthusian traps and poor health and longevity measured by anthropometric indicators and life expectancy Political traps include both domestic traps corruption internal conflict and external traps namely geopolitical traps involving foreign powers Economic traps include poor infrastructure banks harbors roads railroads steam shipping hydroelectric power or raw materials or glaring regional variation in per capita income all significant barriers to industrialization Cultural traps include restrictions on permissible knowledge and linguistic barriers to the culture of discourse in science and engineering which restrained the absorbing and diffusion of knowledge from foreign sources Using Japan and China as examples this book demonstrates how the four types of traps dynamically interact with one another and how one of the two countries Japan was able to escape from the traps earlier than the other country China The book also explores the implications of the argument for post 1950 economic development in East Asia Cognitive Behavioural

Therapy for Adolescents and Young Adults Lawrence Howells, 2018-05-01 Cognitive Behavioural Therapy for Adolescents and Young Adults An Emotion Regulation Approach provides a unique focus on therapeutic practice with adolescents and young adults covering everything from psychological theories of adolescence to the treatment of common emotional difficulties Beginning with a review of development through adolescence into adulthood and the principles of CBT the book highlights problems with traditional models of CBT for adolescents and young adults In a fresh approach this book separates CBT from diagnosis and grounds it instead in emotion science Adolescents and young adults learn not about disorders and symptoms but about emotions emotional traps and how they can use CBT to bring about change There are chapters on fear sadness anger emotion dysregulation and happiness Each chapter provides an outline of emotion science a clear cognitive behavioural formulation trap and evidence based interventions Clinicians are walked through the process using case illustrations Cognitive Behavioural Therapy for Adolescents and Young Adults represents a transformation of CBT practice and will become a valuable treatment manual to training and practising mental health professionals especially psychotherapists specialising in CBT Breaking the Conflict Trap Paul Collier, World Bank, 2003 Breaking the Conflict Trap identifies the dire consequences that civil war has on the development process and offers three main findings First that civil war has adverse ripple effects which are often not taken into account by those who determine whether wars start or end Second some countries are more likely than others to experience civil war conflict and therefore the risks of civil war differ considerably according to a country's characteristics including its economic stability Finally Breaking the Conflict Trap explores viable international measures that can be taken to reduce the global incidence of civil war and proposes a practical agenda for action This book should serve as a wake up call to anyone in the international community who still thinks that development and conflict are distinct issues This book will also be of interest to researchers academics and anyone interested in conflict and post conflict resolution Jacket Refrigerating World, 1925 Sanitary & Heating Engineering, 1928

Hurst, 2014-10-07 David Hurst has a unique knowledge of organizations their function and their failure both in theory and in practice He has spent twenty five years as an operating manager often in crises and turnaround conditions and is also a widely experienced consultant teacher and writer on business This book is his innovative integration of management practice and theory using a systems perspective and analogies drawn from nature to illustrate groundbreaking ideas and their practical application It is designed for readers unfamiliar with sophisticated management concepts and for active practitioners seeking to advance their management and leadership skills Hurst's objective is to help readers make meaning from their own management experience and education and to encourage improvement in their practical judgment and wisdom His approach takes an expansive view of organizations connecting their development to humankind's evolutionary heritage and cultural history It locates the origins of organizations in communities of trust and follows their development and maturation He also crucially tracks the decline of organizations as they age and shows how their strengths become weaknesses in changing circumstances Hurst's core argument is that the human mind is rational in an ecological rather than a logical sense In other words it has evolved to extract cues to action from the specific situations in which it finds itself Therefore contexts matter and Hurst shows how passion reason and power can be used to change and sustain organizations for good and ill The result is an inspirational synthesis of management theory and practice that will resonate with every reader's experience A Manual of the Geology of India Henry Benedict Medlicott, 1879 "A" New
