Breeding And Keeping Geckos:

Breeding and Keeping Geckos John Coborn,1995 Geckos may be the ultimate exotic pets This book tells you all you need to know to enjoy them and keep them healthy

Keeping and Breeding Geckos Hermann Seufer,1991 Geckos are such new pets there is little information on gecko husbandry available for the average hobbyist Keeping and breeding geckos is the first modern coverage of the principle species of the group that are being kept and bred today

Basic Leopard Gecko Care and Guide Simon Ben,2020-09-17 The majority of leopard geckos available today are native to the desert regions of Afghanistan Iran India and Pakistan Leopard geckos have been bred in Canada since the 1970s and are now quite common It is easier to breed geckos than to import new geckos Breeding leopard geckos is quite easy many breeders have created new geckos with unique sizes colors and other traits that make them popular among reptile enthusiasts It is not easy to determine the exact age of a leopard gecko since its growth and size depends on breeding genetic characteristics health and diet It is not uncommon to see a leopard gecko's color change as it ages The Mack Snow leopard gecko for example will develop a yellowish color as it ages Most baby leopard geckos will have bands on their bodies instead of spots As it grows it will develop into spots This will usually happen when the leopard gecko is one year old So if your gecko still has bands and no spots chances are it is still under a year old How long do leopard geckos live Leopard geckos can live up to 20 years or more if their owner takes good care of them by ensuring they have a good diet suitable habitat and monitoring their health There have been cases of leopard geckos living up to 30 years of age but although this is possible it is usually rare for them to reach this age Leopard geckos in the wild will have a much shorter lifespan due to predators disease and injury that are generally avoided when kept as pets Leopard geckos are one of the most popular animals in the lizard family They are sturdy easy to maintain require little space and have a long lifespan that make them an ideal companion for families They make great first pets and can easily be bred to create babies of different colors and sizes making them ideal for experienced reptile owners as well They only feed on insects so their diet is not complicated like other reptiles such as bearded dragons and they are very docile and can be manipulated without worrying about aggression Their natural environment is difficult high temperatures and weeks without food or water Leopard geckos are adapted to survive where other animals cannot This makes the leopard gecko extremely robust and it also explains why many people believe that they are so easy to care for and take care of as pets

Facts about the leopard gecko When agitated the leopard gecko barks The leopard gecko uses its tail as an emergency fat and water supply When confronted with a predator or if attacked the leopard gecko will let go of its tail to give the predator a distraction and escape The tail of the leopard gecko will eventually grow back Unlike other geckos leopard geckos don't have sticky gills sticky pads on their paws and have few claws instead That's why you can keep a leopard gecko in a cage without worrying about it escaping They have an unusual anatomy With the right angle you can look in one ear see through their head and see their other ear Want more Tips on Leopard Gecko Care Then get a copy of this book In this book you will find

Leopard geckos have become a very popular and common pet and have been extensively bred within the United States over the last thirty years Due to the extensive breeding there are multiple different colour morphs available which adds to the desirability of the leopard gecko as a pet The leopard gecko scientifically known as Eublepharis macularius is a crepuscular ground dwelling lizard Unlike the majority of other gecko species the leopard gecko possesses moveable eyelids which gives the gecko an anthropomorphic quality The specie s extraordinary set of eyelids is the basis for the scientific name Eublepharis is a combination of the Greek words Eu meaning good and Blephar meaning eyelid The name Macularius is derived from the Latin word Macula which translates to spot or blemish which is in obvious reference to the animal s spotted markings They are naturally found in the deserts of Asia Pakistan and northern India This book was previously published by Pet Care Professionals under the same name Pet Business ,1996 Newsletter Minnesota Herpetological Society,2006
