

Bribery

A person (e.g., a public official, witness, juror) voluntarily solicits or accepts any benefit in exchange for influencing an official act so as to afford the giver better than fair treatment.

Unlike extortion, there is no coercion, so neither person is intimidated and both engage in the act voluntarily. Therefore, both the giver and receiver of the bribe can be held liable for bribery.

Extortion

A person obtains property from another using coercion (e.g., threats of future physical injury, property damage, or exposure to criminal charges or public humiliation) or an implicit or explicit threat to give the payer worse than fair treatment.

There is a clear offender (the person using coercion) and victim (the threatened person) who is intimidated into turning over property to the offender.
