Connectionist Approaches to Language Learning David Touretzky,2012-12-06 arise automatically as a result of the recursive structure of the task and the continuous nature of the SRN s state space Elman also introduces a new graphical technique for study ing network behavior based on principal components analysis He shows that sentences with multiple levels of embedding produce state space trajectories with an intriguing self similar structure The development and shape of a recurrent network s state space is the subject of Pollack s paper the most provocative in this collection Pollack looks more closely at a connectionist network as a continuous dynamical system He describes a new type of machine learning phenomenon induction by phase transition He then shows that under certain conditions the state space created by these machines can have a fractal or chaotic structure with a potentially infinite number of states This is graphically illustrated using a higher order recurrent network trained to recognize various regular languages over binary strings Finally Pollack suggests that it might be possible to exploit the fractal dynamics of these systems to achieve a generative capacity beyond that of finite state machines Engineering and Scientific Papers ,1919 Institute of Management Series ,1928 Educational Measurements for the Class Teacher ... Board of Education. Bureau of Reference, Research and Statistics,1928 Behavioral Aspects of the European Carbon Markets Fernando Palao,2020-02-24 This work is based on one of the most researched fields nowadays in finance known as behavioral finance which proposes psychology and sociology based theories to explain market anomalies Behavioral finance tries to fill the gap of classical financial models that based on the idea of fully efficient markets where all the agents interact rationally between each other are unable to explain mathematically some market behaviors During the study the presence of four behavioral basis in the European Carbon Markets will be analysed The first effect is the presence of price clustering defined as the tendency to observe certain trade prices more frequently than others is inconsistent with economic rationality and it is not in agreement with the idea that prices follow a random walk Secondly the feature of size clustering the concentration of the size of trades at certain amounts may prevent carbon traders from achieving optimal trade sizes Next is studied the presence of psychological barriers that can provide new insights about how returns and volatility can be affected by the proximity of carbon price to key levels Finally we investigate the presence of herding behavior by testing if carbon agents act in a sequence imitating each other As the major findings we can highlight the existence of price clustering where prices ending tend to be concentrated at round numbers ended in 0 and 5 Additionally there it exists a size clustering effect where carbon traders tend to cluster their orders in small sizes and in round numbers multiples of five contracts We also have shown the existence of key prices that modifies the behavior of carbon market actors Finally we show the existence of the herding effect in the European Futures Carbon Market despite of being a blind market and dominated by professional participants New York Supreme Court , The Encyclopædia Britannica Thomas Spencer Baynes,1886 Technical Report Aeronautical Research Council (Great Britain),1914 Includes its Reports which are also issued separately The Encyclopædia Britannica ,1893 Stenographic Reports of High School Lessons Romiett Stevens,1912 American Gas Journal ,1930 Physical
