Identifying and Reaching Populations at Risk: The Paradox of Breast Cancer Control, 2002 This project aimed to examine the shifting demographics of the medically underserved and identify newly evolving sociocultural factors that might act as barriers to care Understanding these factors and making recommendations for their culturally sensitive removal will help improve patient compliance We used a qualitative semi structured interview methodology to document the shifting social cultural and associated logistical barriers to breast cancer screening to gain insight into the underlying logic supporting these barriers and understand how these logics and hence barriers are perpetuated We uncovered a potential cultural model of health maintenance and prevention among African American women that may negatively impact breast cancer prevention delivery The results of this project have formed the foundation of a research program to validate our findings and evaluate the potential impact of this cultural model of prevention on chemoprevention uptake among African American women

Women at High Risk to Breast Cancer B.A. Stoll, 2012-12-06 A reprint of the 1989 edition of this book has been made necessary by continuing demand after rapid exhaustion of the first printing In the two years since its appearance there has been relatively little expansion of knowledge on this topic and its massive accumulation of references still remains an authoritative guide in the difficult task of developing a national breast cancer prevention model At the same time its thesis has been sharpened by the publication of a companion volume Approaches to Breast Cancer Prevention Kluwer 1991 similarly edited byrne Breast cancer is on the increase throughout the Western world where it is a major source of anxiety among women The disease is also becoming more frequent in Asian and South American countries where once it was relatively uncommon Multiple factors are suspected of promoting the disease and the increasing risk is attributed to recent changes in life style and diet This book is intended to provide an authoritative and balanced survey of the latest research into the genetic familial hormonal reproductive nutritional social and geographic factors known to be associated with an increased predisposition to the disease

Resource Compendium Available for Cervical and Breast Cancer Control and Prevention in the Majority World Laurie

Elit,2008 Cervix Cancer is the second leading cause of death for women world wide The rates of breast cancer are quickly rising through out the world In part these dismal statistics are related to the fact that disease in low resource countries is identified in advanced stages when cure is improbable Cervix and breast cancer are preventable or at least curable when identified earlier This can happen when screening programs are in place This compendium provide references to the international agencies and societies involved in dealing with this problem research conducted on breast and cervical cancer prevention and control in the low resource countries of the Western hemisphere and educational resources available for cancer control planner through to the public Breast Cancer Risk Reduction and Early Detection Edward R. Sauter, Mary B. Daly,2010-01-22 While many comprehensive texts have been written on the treatment of breast cancer the most common cancer among women there are relatively few which cover in depth the prevention and early detection of the disease The goal of this work is to present what experts in the field feel is the current knowledge and future direction of breast cancer prevention and early detection We begin Part I of the book with a review of risk factors both genetic and environmental We next review progress in the use of chemoprevention Notably chemoprevention risk reduction studies have led to FDA approval of two medications which measurably reduce disease incidence among women at increased risk although with some risk of treatment related side effects Newer agents in the pipeline which may also reduce risk among normal risk women are also discussed Surgical risk reducing strategies complete the section on prevention including both the benefits and downsides to this more aggressive approach Even with aggressive prevention strategies some women will develop breast cancer For these women early detection is critical to minimize disease spread and maximize long term survival Part II of this book reviews current and upcoming approaches to early detection Imaging strategies including mammography breast ultrasound MRI and PET imaging are reviewed The potential for molecular tumor targeting to detect disease prior to the formation of a mass visible by anatomic imaging is presented Breast Cancer Screening Harri Vainio, International Agency for Research on Cancer,2002 Breast cancer is the leading site of new cancer cases in women Breast cancer detection is currently primarily based on physical examination by health care professionals chance findings by women breast self examination and mammography used for diagnosis or for routine screening Early enough detection through mass screening with mammography has been introduced in many countries in the hope that early intervention would lead to reduced mortality and less aggressive treatment The aim of this publication is to provide an independent authoritative review of the evidence of the efficacy and effectiveness of breast cancer screening This will be of value to governments public health officials and others concerned with policy recommendations for cancer control Breast and Gynecological Cancers Mahesh K. Shetty,2013-03-15 Low and middle income countries have seen a dramatic rise in the incidence of breast and gynecological cancers in the past decade Organized cancer screening programs are not widely available in developing countries leading to disproportionately higher mortality rates compared to those in the developed world This book addresses cost effective strategies for implementing programs aimed at screening for the early detection of breast cervical endometrial and ovarian cancers A well woman clinic concept providing such services as part of women s health examinations is proposed aiming to ensure patient compliance by limiting clinic visits required for initial testing and diagnosis of screen positive cases

National Strategic Plan for the Early Detection and Control of Breast and Cervical Cancers +,1993 Approaches to Breast Cancer Prevention B. A. Stoll,1991-03-31 Fulfilling the Potential of Cancer Prevention and Early Detection National Research Council,Institute of Medicine,National Cancer Policy Board,2003-06-07 Cancer ranks second only to heart disease as a leading cause of death in the United States making it a tremendous burden in years of life lost patient suffering and economic costs Fulfilling the Potential for Cancer Prevention and Early Detection reviews the proof that we can dramatically reduce cancer rates The National Cancer Policy Board part of the Institute of Medicine outlines a national strategy to realize the promise of cancer prevention and early detection including specific and wide ranging recommendations Offering a wealth of information and directly addressing major controversies the book includes A detailed look at how significantly cancer could be reduced through lifestyle changes evaluating approaches used to alter eating smoking and exercise habits An analysis of the intuitive notion that screening for cancer leads to improved health outcomes including a discussion of screening methods potential risks and current recommendations An examination of cancer prevention and control opportunities in primary health care delivery settings including a review of interventions aimed at improving provider performance Reviews of professional education and training programs research trends and opportunities and federal programs that support cancer prevention and early detection This in depth volume will be of interest to policy analysts cancer and public health specialists health care administrators and providers researchers insurers medical journalists and patient advocates Approaches to Breast Cancer Prevention B.A. Stoll,2012-12-06 This book is a logical companion volume to Women at High Risk to Breast Cancer Kluwer 1989 edited by me previously It distinguishes two aspects of current approaches to clinical breast cancer prevention The first is the need to advise individual women on how they might reduce their personal risk while the second is the design of measures aimed at reducing the total incidence of breast cancer in the community While the former is a problem faced daily by clinicians the latter is a goal which will involve large scale carefully planned interventional studies Because knowledge of the risk factors for breast cancer is incomplete and clinical trial reports are scarce there is as yet no scientifically based model for personal breast cancer prevention Nevertheless widespread publicity associated with breast screening programmes has created a large group of highly anxious women who have been informed that they are at higher than average risk to the disease They are concerned by the personal threat posed by a family history of the disease and by the alleged dangers of obesity diet alcohol or the use of hormonal agents such as oral contraceptives or hormone replacement therapy Confronting the Challenge, Protecting the Future Lori Maass Vidlak,Debra Dahab,Martha Gadberry,Nebraska.
