Reading and Dyslexia in Different Orthographies Nicola Brunswick, Sine McDougall, Paul de Mornay Davies, 2010-06-10 This book provides a unique and accessible account of current research on reading and dyslexia in different orthographies While most research has been conducted in English this text presents cross language comparisons to provide insights into universal aspects of reading development and developmental dyslexia in alphabetic and non alphabetic languages The book brings together contributions from a group of leading literacy researchers from around the world It begins by examining the development of language skills in monolingual speakers of

alphabetic and non alphabetic languages it then explores literacy acquisition in bilingual children learning to read in languages with different spelling sound rules including English French Greek Welsh and Japanese The second section is devoted to developmental dyslexia in monolingual and bilingual speakers of different languages and examines the impact of variations in orthography on the symptoms and aetiology of dyslexia The final section explores the contribution of brain imaging to the study of impaired and unimpaired reading giving an up to the minute picture of how the brain deals with different languages and writing systems This is ideal reading for advanced undergraduates and postgraduates who have an interest in language acquisition reading and spelling as well as speech and language therapists teachers and special educational needs professionals

Dyslexia in First and Foreign Language Learning Monika Lodej, 2016-08-17 According to International Educational Statistics 2008 there are total of 654.9 million school age children in the world If dyslexia affects 10-15% of these youth Fletcher et al 2007 this translates to approximately 65.98 million students with difficulties in reading and writing The EU strategic plan for education 2010 recognises the need for EU citizens to speak a foreign language As such foreign language courses are introduced on an obligatory basis at the primary level of education Dyslexic students are not exempt from this regulation and thus are confronted with different language systems that must be mastered The difficulty here escalates if the systems differ significantly in their levels of orthographic transparency Reading and writing are operationalised by the same biological functions that are defined by the universal perspective However language systems differ in terms of their transparency for example English and French are considered opaque scripts whereas Spanish and Italian are described as transparent orthographies These differences are discussed in this book as part of the language specific perspective which can in turn raise questions such as Is a dyslexic student equally impaired in any language they study and Is the type of difficulty primarily dependent on the language system or is it rather a dyslexia syndrome This volume provides answers through a synthesis of research on reading difficulties in first and foreign languages and existing taxonomies of dyslexia sub types

For decades human cognition involved in reading aloud and speech production has been investigated extensively a quote search of the two in google scholar produces about 83 000 and 255 000 results respectively This large amount of research has produced quite detailed descriptions of the cognitive mechanisms that allow people to speak or to read aloud a word However despite the fact that reading aloud and speech production share some processes generation of phonology and preparation of a motor speech response the research in this two areas seems to have taken parallel and independent tracks with almost no contact between the two The present Research Topic takes an initial step towards building a bridge that will link the two research areas as we believe that such an endeavour is essential for moving forward in our understanding of how the mind brain processes words To this aim we encourage contributions exploring the relation between speech production and reading aloud The questions the Research Topic should address include but are not limited to the following To what extent are speech production and word reading reading aloud similar Are there some shared components and or mechanisms between the two process Is the time course of the supposed shared mechanisms activation similar in the two processes How does the different input conceptual vs orthographic interact with the types of information that reading and speaking share semantic and phonological knowledge articulatory codes How does a difference in the input affect the supposed common stages of processing i e phonological encoding and articulatory planning and execution We welcome any kind of contribution e g original research article review opinion that answers the above or other questions related to the Topic Dyslexia
