Sujata Iyengar, 2013-04-12 Was there such a thing as a modern notion of race in the English Renaissance and if so was skin color its necessary marker In fact early modern texts described human beings of various national origins including English as turning white brown tawny black green or red for any number of reasons from the effects of the sun's rays or imbalance of the bodily humors to sexual desire or the application of makeup It is in this cultural environment that the seventeenth century London Gazette used the term black to describe both dark skinned African runaways and dark haired Britons such as Scots who are now unquestioningly conceived of as white In Shades of Difference Sujata Iyengar explores the cultural mythologies of skin color in a period during which colonial expansion and the slave trade introduced Britons to more dark skinned persons than at any other time in their history Looking to texts as divergent as sixteenth century Elizabethan erotic verse seventeenth century lyrics and Restoration prose romances Iyengar considers the construction of race during the early modern period without oversimplifying the emergence of race as a color coded classification or a black white opposition Rather race embodiment and skin color are examined in their multiple contexts historical geographical and literary Iyengar engages works that have not previously been incorporated into discussions of the formation of race such as Marlowe's Hero and Leander and Shakespeare's Venus and Adonis By rethinking the emerging early modern connections between the notions of race skin color and gender Shades of Difference furthers an ongoing discussion with originality and impeccable scholarship
