advanced very high resolution radiometer AVHRR Arthur P. Cracknell,1997-04-23 Since the launch of the first of the Advanced Very High Resolution Radiometers AVHRRs in 1978 the data from these instruments has used for a wide range of non meteorological applications In this book the author describes satellite system AVHRRs control of the spacecraft and data recovery arrangements The book covers processing of the data to extract useful environmental information The applications of the data to marine problems based primarily on the study of sea surface temperatures from the thermal infrared channels of the instrument are considered as well as the study of vegetation and a whole variety of other land based and hydrological applications Advanced Very High Resolution Radiometer (AVHRR) Imagery Applied to Lake Superior Thermal Structure

Remote Sensing and Geographical Information Systems in Epidemiology S.I. Hay,David James Rogers,Sarah E. Randolph,2000-08-29 Global problems require global information which satellites can now provide With ever more sophisticated control methods being developed for infectious diseases our ability to map spatial and temporal variation in risk is more important than ever Only then may we plan control campaigns and deliver novel interventions and remedies where the need is greatest and sustainable success is most likely This book presents a comprehensive guide to using the very latest methods of surveillance from satellites including analysing spatial data within geographical information systems interpreting complex biological patterns and predicting risk both today and as it may change in the future Of all infectious disease systems those that involve free living invertebrate vectors or intermediate hosts are most susceptible to changing environmental conditions and have hitherto received most attention from the marriage of analytical biology with this new space technology Accordingly this volume presents detailed case studies on malaria African trypanosomiasis sleeping sickness tick borne infections and helminths worms For those who are unfamiliar with this science and unsure how to start the book ends with a chapter of practical advice on where to seek hands on instruction The lessons to be learned from these studies are applicable to many other epidemiological and ecological problems that face us today most significantly the preservation of the world s biodiversity Only book to provide a synthesis of complex biology quantitative analysis space technology and practical applications focused on solving real epidemiological problems on a global scale Broad scope with methods relevant to subjects ranging from biodiversity to public health Practical advice on relevant courses 24 pages of colour plates

Remote Sensing Time Series Claudia Kuenzer, Stefan Dech, Wolfgang Wagner, 2015-04-28 This volume comprises an outstanding variety of chapters on Earth Observation based time series analyses undertaken to reveal past and current land surface dynamics for large areas What exactly are time series of Earth Observation data Which sensors are available to generate real time series How can they be processed to reveal their valuable hidden information Which challenges are encountered on the way and which pre processing is needed And last but not least which processes can be observed How are large regions of our planet changing over time and which dynamics and trends are visible These and many other questions are answered within this book Remote Sensing Time Series Analyses Revealing Land Surface Dynamics Internationally renowned experts from Europe the USA and China present their exciting findings based on the exploitation of satellite data archives from well known sensors such as AVHRR MODIS Landsat ENVISAT ERS and METOP amongst others Selected review and methods chapters provide a good overview over time series processing and the recent advances in the optical and radar domain A fine selection of application chapters addresses multi class land cover and land use change at national to continental scale the derivation of patterns of vegetation phenology biomass assessments investigations on snow cover duration and recent dynamics as well as urban sprawl observed over time

Cloud Detection for Advanced Very High Resolution Radiometer (AVHRR) Satellite Sea Surface Temperature (SST) Imagery Using a Multi-layer Perceptron Neural Network Richard Peter de Groof, 2016 Accurate sea surface temperatures SST are relevant for the work of oceanographers investigating many aspects of the ocean s surface Satellite imagery provides access to this type of data to a degree not previously attainable Cloud contamination represents an obstacle to the utilization of the satellite derived SSTs because it interferes with the retrieval of the temperatures below The Artificial Neural Network is capable of recognizing patterns Furthermore types of neural nets can learn any continuous mapping to an arbitrary accuracy We investigate the use of one such network a multi layer perceptron for cloud detection of Advanced Very High Resolution Radiometry AVHRR SST imagery utilizing the multiple channels contained therein We find that this approach is suitable for and provides a fast and powerful solution to the problem of detection of cloud contaminated pixels in satellite imagery
