New Perspectives on Foreign Aid and Economic Development B. Mak Arvin, 2002-05-30 The success or failure of economic assistance programs is a shared responsibility of recipient countries and donors The negative attitude about aid prevalent today underscores a perception the aid has failed Critics often blame corrupt regimes weak governments or poor economic policies However the poor track record of aid is also due to donors inability to allocate limited funds effectively and poor coordination of their aid efforts Declining aid budgets have led to fundamental questioning of foreign aid s allocation and utility while the apparent ineffectiveness of aid has shrunk aid budgets and turned public opinion against providing it This edited collection containing pieces written by leading development specialists evaluates these emerging questions of allocation and efficiency Development economists policy makers and development specialists will benefit from reading this work Chapters examine the optimal and intertemporal allocation of aid the role and accountability of NGOs in allocation the importance of untying a new perspective on low levels of aid and links between the allocation pattern of donors Additional chapters deal with the impact of aid on economic growth democracy wage inequality between

Sanders,1987 In the past twenty years the study of urban politics has shifted from a predominant concern with political culture and ethos to a preoccupation with political economy particularly that of urban development Urban scholars have come to recognize that cities are shaped by forces beyond their boundaries From that focus have emerged the views that cities are clearly engaged in economic competition that market processes are shaped by national policy decisions sometimes intentionally and sometimes inadvertently and that the costs and benefits of economic growth are unevenly distributed But what else needs to be said about the policies and politics of urban development To supplement prevailing theories The Politics of Urban Development argues that the role of local actors in making development decisions merits closer study Whatever the structural constraints politics still matters Collectively the essays provide ample evidence that local government officials and other community actors do not simply follow the imperatives that derive from the national political economy they are able to assert a significant degree of influence over the shared destiny of an urban population The impact of the collection is to heighten awareness of local political practices and of how and why they make a difference Staff Development in Human Service Organizations Harvey J. Bertcher,1988
