The workload of the office is measured 2 In terms of actual clients; rather than attempting to measured the firm in terms of the billing hours or dollars. Two individual clients serviced by the firm illustrate the complexity of coordinating the activities within one local, targeted firm within the region. The milestones permitted the research group to organize its findings in a manner that is consistent with other efforts within the justice system (law firm) while also providing similar structure for a CPA that is governed by parallel expectations.

However, since the law firm was a component of the justice system the findings are grouped into fewer categories to allow the research group to structure the intent of the recommendations provided by SEARCH to a specific case study (of the CPA) regulated by professional, federal and state statutes/regulations to a professional law firm within a
