Social Class and Transnational Human Capital Jürgen Gerhards, Hans Silke, Sören Carlson, 2017-06-26 Due to globalization processes foreign language skills knowledge about other countries and intercultural competences have increasingly become important for societies and people s social positions Previous research on social inequality however has dominantly focused on the reproduction of class structures within the boundaries of a particular nation state without considering the importance of these specific skills and competences Within Social Class and Transnational Human Capital authors Gerhards Hans and Carlson refer to these skills as transnational human capital and ask to what extent access to this increasingly sought after resource depends on social class Based on Pierre Bourdieu s theory of class they investigate this question via both quantitative and qualitative empirical analyses In doing so the authors focus among other examples on the so called school year abroad i e students spending up to a year abroad while attending school a practice which is rather popular in Germany but also quite common in many other countries Thus this insightful volume explores how inequalities in the acquisition of transnational human capital and new forms of social distinction are produced within families depending on their class position and the educational strategies parents pursue when trying to prepare their children for a globalizing world An enlightening title this book will appeal to undergraduate and postgraduate students as well as postdoctoral researchers interested in fields such as sociology social inequality research globalization studies and educational studies

Enhancing Teaching and Learning in the 21st-Century Academic Library Bradford Lee Eden, 2015-03-18 Libraries of all types have undergone significant developments in the last few decades The rate of change in the academic library a presence for decades now has been increasing in the first decade of this century It is no exaggeration to claim that it is undergoing a top to bottom redefinition In this second volume of the series Creating the 21st Century Academic Library we explore the initiatives in student learning and training that are underway in our academic libraries The 13 chapters range from librarians redesigning the space in the library in order to assume control of the campus bookstore to implementing a MOOC where the problems of providing material to potentially thousands of students taking an online course must somehow overcome copyright restrictions A chapter describes how the iPad has become the chosen delivery mechanism for a rich array of resources that finally begin to reflect the educational potential of the digital world Another chapter tells how a collaboration creates an audio archive to enrich the experiences of patrons and raise the visibility of the special collections unit on campus Gamification plays a role in two chapters and active learning is featured in another that employs the technologies of interactive whiteboards clickers and wireless slates These approaches employing new technologies and terminology signal that we have begun a new era in the definition and design of the academic library We can't expect the redefined academic library to assume its final shape any time soon if ever but the transformation is well underway
