Apollo and America's Moon Landing Program - Project Apollo World Spaceflight News,Roger D. Launius,National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA),2018-01-05 This official NASA history document presents a narrative account of the Apollo lunar landing program from its origin through its assessment The preface states The program to land an American on the Moon and return safely to Earth in the 1960s has been called by some observers a defining event of the twentieth century Pulitzer Prize winning historian Arthur M Schlesinger Jr even suggested that when Americans two centuries hence study the twentieth century they will view the Apollo lunar landing as the critical event of the century While that conclusion might be premature there can be little doubt but that the flight of Apollo 11 in particular and the overall Apollo program in general was a high point in humanity s quest to explore the universe beyond Earth From the introduction On 25 May 1961 President John F Kennedy announced to the nation a goal of sending an American safely to the Moon before the end of the decade This decision involved much study and review prior to making it public and tremendous expenditure and effort to make it a reality by 1969 Only the building of the Panama Canal rivaled the Apollo program s size as the largest non military technological endeavor ever undertaken by the United States only the Manhattan Project was comparable in a wartime setting The human spaceflight imperative was a direct outgrowth of it Projects Mercury at least in its latter stages Gemini and Apollo were each designed to execute it It was finally successfully accomplished on 20 July 1969 when Apollo 11 s astronaut Neil Armstrong left the Lunar Module and set foot on the surface of the Moon Contents include The Kennedy Perspective on Space The Soviet Challenge Renewed Reevaluating NASA s Priorities The NASA Position Decision An Assessment of the Decision Gearing Up for Project Apollo The Program Management Concept How Do We Go to the Moon

Prelude to Apollo Mercury Bridging the Technological Gap From Gemini to Apollo Satellite Support of Apollo Building Saturn
The Apollo Spacecraft The Lunar Module Trips to the Moon A Meaning for Apollo John Houbolt William F.
Causey, 2020-03-15 In May 1961 President Kennedy announced that the United States would attempt to land a man on the moon and return him safely to the earth before the end of that decade Yet NASA did not have a specific plan for how to accomplish that goal Over the next fourteen months NASA vigorously debated several options At first the consensus was to send one big rocket with several astronauts to the moon land and explore and then take off and return the astronauts to earth in the same vehicle Another idea involved launching several smaller Saturn V rockets into the earth orbit where a lander would be assembled and fueled before sending the crew to the moon But it was a small group of engineers led by John C Houbolt who came up with the plan that propelled human beings to the moon and back not only safely but faster cheaper and more reliably Houbolt and his colleagues called it lunar orbit rendezvous or LOR At first the LOR idea was ignored then it was criticized and then finally dismissed by many senior NASA officials Nevertheless the group under Houbolt's leadership continued to press the LOR idea arguing that it was the only way to get men to the moon and back by President Kennedy's deadline Houbolt persisted risking his career in the face of overwhelming opposition This is the story of how John Houbolt convinced NASA to adopt the plan that made history
