Making Sense of Charter Schools Ron W. Zimmer, 2006 The debate over charter schools often appears to be driven by theory and ideology with little information on how the reform itself is affecting students This occasional paper adds clarity to the debate by consolidating the results from the RAND Corporation's comprehensive assessment of charter schools A key feature of this assessment has been the use of individual student level data to track students from school to school over time and to measure their test scores in traditional and charter schools The analysis dispels many of the arguments from charter proponents or critics The results show that test scores for charter school students are keeping pace with comparable students in traditional public schools Similarly minority students are performing no better in charter than in traditional classrooms so charters are not affecting the achievement gap for these students Charter proponents have also expected that competition from charters would improve the performance of traditional public schools but the evidence does not support this contention On a more positive note charter schools have achieved comparable test score results with fewer public resources and have emphasized non core subjects more than have traditional schools In addition the evidence shows that charter schools have not created 3white enclaves4 or 3skimmed4 high quality students from traditional public schools as critics feared Finally we discovered that school level operations varied considerably between charter and traditional schools but these operational differences had little effect on student achievement

Charter School Operations and Performance Ron W. Zimmer, 2003 The report analyzes an array of issues pertaining to accessibility student achievement governance and operation of charter schools in California Four specific research questions were investigated 1 What population of students attends charter schools 2 Is student achievement higher in charter schools than in conventional public schools 3 What oversight and support do the chartering authorities provide 4 How do charter schools differ from their conventional public school counterparts in terms of their operation including finances academic achievement and staffing
