Charting A Professional Course Issues And Controversies In Education:

Charting a Professional Course Donald P. Kauchak, Paul D. Eggen, Mary D. Burbank, 2005 This text is designed to provide readers with the knowledge and understanding needed to make informed decisions about key educational issues in today's world and knowledge to not only shape their own personal professional growth but also the future of education. Articles are timely and accessible, reflect different perspectives in order to encourage critical thought and debate, offer the thinking of a wide range of writers reflecting these different perspectives including David Berliner, Larry Cuban, Elliot Eisner, Martin Haberman, and Sonia Nieto, and are organized topically under such headings as Diversity, Schools, Curriculum, Instruction, Technology, Governance, and Finance. Teachers and Teacher Education, Foundations and Educational Reform, Supporting Pedagogy, Section Openers introduce each section and provide an overview of the major issues. Article Overviews introduce each article, framing it in terms of its contribution to the field. Think About This questions direct the reader to key points or issues in the article. A Personal Reflection, the last question for each article, asks readers to apply the contents of the article to their own teaching situation. Additional Resources at the end of each section are designed to encourage the reader to explore topics further, either through Additional Readings or Exploring the Internet. A Correlating Table on the inside front and back covers links the articles in this text to topics typically covered in Introduction to Education and Foundations of Education texts. Arranged alphabetically by topic, the table allows students and instructors to cross-reference articles in this text to topics discussed in other texts, including the authors' own Introduction to Teaching: Becoming a Professional, Second Edition.

The School Leader's Guide to Learner-Centered Education Barbara L. McCombs, Lynda Miller, 2009 The time is right and the need is profound for learner-centered practices in schools. McCombs and Miller describe the tools available and how a school can use them to make substantial changes that increase student performance. Jean W. Pierce, Professor of Educational Psychology, Northern Illinois University, A new leadership paradigm for increasing collaboration and boosting achievement. In today's educational environment, school leaders must find new ways to create a positive school climate for staff and students while helping them meet rigorous testing and accountability requirements. The School Leader's Guide to Learner-Centered Education introduces a transformative leadership model for creating and sustaining a learner-centered school environment. Using core principles of educational psychology, the authors examine how educators can support student growth, development, and achievement by focusing on key factors such as cognition, metacognition, motivation, affect, and individual differences. Numerous reflective exercises, assessment tools, and real-life success stories help readers provide moral leadership for creating school change, incorporate learning standards without sacrificing student engagement, form learner-centered support groups that utilize networking and technology, prepare students for the challenges of global citizenship, promote success for diverse populations and marginalized groups. Designed to meet the needs of a rapidly evolving world, this new leadership paradigm provides school principals, superintendents, and district leaders with the means to engage all members of the educational community in a lifelong process of growth improvement and empowerment
