
We are in the midst of a 'research-bourgeois' revolution within higher education in the UK. Part of the global project of neo-liberalism to strengthen the link between money and work, and driven by research assessment, diverse research use-values are being subordinated to homogeneous RAE-value. Academic research workers are becoming alienated from the product of their labour. Once freely available to all academics, "intellectual commons"—well-stocked library, material security, time and other resources—are being enclosed, access becoming dependent upon production of RAE-value. Two new classes are emerging in academia as some research workers are forced to alienate their own research-labour-power, selling their ability to carry out research work to 'research capitalists', who are able to appropriate a portion of the RAE-value which results.

Alienation, Class and Enclosure in UK Universities

David Harvie

Introduction

The working conditions of many academics in UK universities have deteriorated sharply over the past two decades or so, even if 'for many the academic labour process remains in its core activities [of teaching, research, scholarship, counselling and administration] remarkably constant' in terms of the type of work performed (Miller, 1991: 111). There have been dramatic and drastic changes in higher education: university budgets, together with funding in general, such as student grants, have been cut; student numbers have increased; and, assessment of both teaching and research has been introduced with a vengeance. There has been a consequent effect on academic workloads. Academics have been squeezed by pressure from three sources. First, there is an increased number of students: a system designed to impart learning to a small elite, as well as providing an element of pastoral care, is now struggling to adjust to mass education. Second, related to the burgeoning student population, and despite the employment of dedicated administrators in many
