Defensible Fence Fighting Terror Enabl:

Defensible Borders for a Lasting Peace Yuval Stienitz, 2005 Moving Health Sovereignty in Africa Andrew F. Cooper, Hany Besada, 2016-04-15 Today's era of intense globalization has unleashed dynamic movements of people, pathogens and pests that overwhelm the static territorial jurisdictions on which the governance provided by sovereign states and their formal intergovernmental institutions is based. This world of movement calls for new ideas and institutions to govern people's health, above all in Africa where the movements and health challenges are the most acute. This book insightfully explores these challenges in ways that put the perspectives of Africans themselves at centre stage. It begins with the long central and still compelling African health challenge of combating the pandemic of HIV/AIDS. It then examines the global governance responses by the major multilateral organizations of the World Bank and the World Trade Organization and the newer informal flexible democratically oriented ones of the Group of Eight. It also addresses the compounding health challenge created by climate change to assess both its intensifying impact on Africa and how all international institutions have largely failed to link climate and health in their governance response. It concludes with several recommendations about the innovative ideas and institutions that offer a way to closing the great global governance gaps and thus improving Africans' health and that of citizens beyond.

Congressional Record United States. Congress, 1965 Decentring Security Mark Bevir, 2018-12-07 Contemporary security governance often relies on markets and networks to link public agencies to non-governmental actors. This book explores the rise, nature and future of these new forms of security governance across various domestic, transnational and international settings. The chapters reveal similarities and differences in the way security governance operates in various policy settings. The contributors argue that the similarities generally arise because policy elites at various levels of governance have come to believe that security depends on building resilience and communities through various joined-up arrangements, networks and partnerships. Differences nonetheless persist because civil servants, street-level bureaucrats, voluntary sector actors and citizens all draw on diverse traditions to interpret and at times resist the joined-up security being promoted by these policy elites. This book therefore decentres security governance, showing how all kinds of local traditions influence the way it works in different settings. It pays particular attention to the meanings, cultures and ideologies by which policy actors encounter, interpret and evaluate security dilemmas. This book was originally published as a special issue in Global Crime.
