Cowles, 2023-11-15 Desert Journal A Naturalist Reflects on Arid California is both a tribute to the life and work of Raymond B Cowles and a call to reflect on humanity's relationship with nature Born in 1896 in South Africa Cowles developed a lifelong fascination with wildlife during his boyhood which shaped his pioneering work in reptilian thermoregulation a field he helped establish His research extended far beyond academia influencing generations of students and laying the foundation for ecological awareness in California and beyond Cowles was a visionary deeply concerned about the impact of human population growth on biodiversity Long before these ideas gained mainstream attention he identified the intrinsic link between overpopulation and environmental degradation Though his book on the subject was never published the themes resonate throughout his writings particularly in Chapter 23 of this volume Cowles holistic perspective embraced the biosphere as an interconnected entity and his ethical framework extended to all life forms He was not only a scientist but also a humanist reveling in the sensory experiences of nature and mourning their loss in an increasingly mechanized world His poetic reflections like a letter written shortly before his death reveal his enduring love for the natural world and his plea for others to preserve its beauty His life was one of dedication and insight as exemplified in his final public discussions about overpopulation and resource scarcity Even in his later years he demonstrated vitality intellectual sharpness and a profound ability to connect with people His legacy captured in this book and in the memories of those he inspired underscores the urgency of harmonizing human aspirations with the needs of the planet This title is part of UC Press s Voices Revived program which commemorates University of California Press s mission to seek out and cultivate the brightest minds and give them voice reach and impact Drawing on a backlist dating to 1893 Voices Revived makes high quality peer reviewed scholarship accessible once again using print on demand technology This title was originally published in 1977

Sand Dunes of the Northern Hemisphere Qi Lu,Mahesh K.

Gaur,Victor R. Squires,2023-03-10 This book in two volumes and with a foreword by the renowned Professor M A J Williams draws on evidence from coastal and inland regions including desert dunes wind blown dust river and lake sediments glacial moraines plant and animal fossils isotope geochemistry soils and prehistoric archaeology to better understand the genesis and development of dunes systems in selected northern hemisphere sand dunes from Asia Africa and the Middle East regions The collection of research papers and case studies that are presented in this book provide the reader with a wealth of information about the distribution and types of sand dunes and an insight into the complexity of sand dune formation migration and management Research in many countries across the northern hemisphere shows that dunes whether coastal or inland are under pressure around the world Much of the pressure comes from human activities and the anthropogenic disturbance when coupled with global warming and alterations to the amount frequency and temporal distribution of precipitation could lead to more serious management challenges in the future There is much that we still need to find out about the origin genesis and development of sand dunes so that they can be managed better The difficult and complex questions being repeatedly raised can be answered only by interdisciplinary endeavours Geomorphologists geologists palaeontologists climatologists ecologists and others can work together on research projects that better define the origin evolution and development of dunes both inland and along the coasts Many chapters in this book attempt to reconstruct past climatic changes in deserts and their margins at a variety of scales in space and time in the expectation that such information might assist in preparing us for future global warming and drying
