Dna Damage And Repair In Human Tissues:

DNA Damage and Repair in Human Tissues Betsy M. Sutherland, Avril D. Woodhead, 2012-12-06 Physical and chemical agents in the environment damage the DNA of humans and pose a major threat to human health today and to the genetic integrity of human populations Although studies on isolated DNA in vitro on prokaryotes on mammalian cells in culture and on laboratory animals have provided essential background information it is now possible to study DNA damage and repair in human tissues directly New techniques of high sensitivity especially those not requiring radioactive labeling have made possible quantitation of DNA damage and repair as well as detection of residual unrepaired DNA lesions In recent years several investigators have taken up the challenge of studying damage and repair responses in humans and we have chosen that work as the special focus of this Symposium Major advances in understanding damage and responses in human skin in blood cells and in human internal organs indicate three major themes First DNA damage levels in human tissues depend not only on the initial exposures but also on the capacity of that tissue for repair of the specific lesion type Second repair in human tissues may differ quantitatively and qualitatively from that in human cells in culture

Bradshaw, Edward A. Dennis, 2011-04-12 Cell signaling which is also often referred to as signal transduction or in more specialized cases transmembrane signaling is the process by which cells communicate with their environment and respond temporally to external cues that they sense there All cells have the capacity to achieve this to some degree albeit with a wide variation in purpose mechanism and response At the same time there is a remarkable degree of similarity over quite a range of species particularly in the eukaryotic kingdom and comparative physiology has been a useful tool in the development of this field The central importance of this general phenomenon sensing of external stimuli by cells has been appreciated for a long time but it has truly become a dominant part of cell and molecular biology research in the past three decades in part because a description of the dynamic responses of cells to external stimuli is in essence a description of the life process itself This approach lies at the core of the developing fields of proteomics and metabolomics and its importance to human and animal health is already plainly evident Provided by publisher Journal of the National Cancer Institute, 2005 Summaries of papers contained in the journal accompany each issue 19 Special Listing, 1981

The Use of Short- and Medium-term Tests for Carcinogens and Data on Genetic Effects in Carcinogenic Hazard Evaluation D. McGregor, Jerry M. Rice, S. Venitt, 1999 Lifetime assays for carcinogenicity in experimental animals together with data on genetic and related effects on a variety of organisms have long been the foundation for predictions of carcinogenic hazard to human beings Recent scientific advances have provided new assays and novel test systems that are beginning to supplement and in the future may even replace the well established tests that have been widely used for the last four decades This publication reviews the evidence that justifies the use of lesions that precede histologically defined malignancy as endpoints to predict carcinogenicity It evaluates the utility of non mammalian species and of genetically engineered rodents as subjects for carcinogenicity tests and mutations in cancer related genes in human and experimental animal tumours as footprints of environmental carcinogens It evaluates the use of established and novel assays for genetic toxicity in the prediction of carcinogenicity Finally it formulates recommendations on the use of such data in the process of evaluation of carcinogenic hazards by the IARC Monographs on the Evaluation of Carcinogenic Risks to Humans
