An End to Political Science, 1970     An End to Political Science, 1970     An End to Political Science Alan Wolfe, 1970     A Critique of Political Science Clyde W. Barrow, 2026-04-06 The Caucus for a New Political Science CNPS was created in 1967 when several hundred dissident political scientists walked out of the annual meeting of the American Political Science Association APSA to protest the Association's refusal to take an official position against the Vietnam War. The CNPS soon expanded its mission to challenge the APSA's behavioral and pluralist orthodoxy, protest a lack of democratic procedure and transparency in the organization, and oppose ties between the leadership and government agencies involved in covert activities. It remains unique among the more than 50 Organized Sections of APSA as the only section that defines itself ideologically and politically rather than by research topic, methodology, subfield, or identity status. A Critique of Political Science distinguishes between the discipline of political science methods and concepts and the profession of political science persons and institutions to move disciplinary history beyond its current form as intellectual history toward a politics of political science. The book argues that understanding the development of a discipline requires the same type of theoretical analysis that political scientists apply to other political institutions. By examining universities and professional associations as political institutions, this approach puts political struggles and ideological conflict at the very core of disciplinary history. In reviewing 50 years of debate, controversy, and in-fighting in the political science profession, the book serves as a critique of the profession and the discipline of political science, which remains woefully disengaged from the concerns of ordinary citizens, particularly the working class and the poor throughout the world.

Political Science Pedagogy William W. Sokoloff, 2019-08-29 The field of political science has not given sufficient attention to pedagogy. This book outlines why this is a problem and promotes a more reflective and self-critical form of political science pedagogy. To this end, the author examines innovative work on radical pedagogy, such as critical race theory and feminist theory, as well as more traditional perspectives on political science pedagogy. Bridging the divide between this research and scholarship on both teaching and learning opens the prospect of a critical, radical, and utopian form of political science pedagogy. With chapters on Socrates, Frantz Fanon, Paulo Freire, Leo Strauss, Sheldon S. Wolin, and e-learning, and a prison field trip, this book outlines a new path for political science pedagogy.

It is hoped that readers will join in questioning

this assumption and will contribute further stepping stones of thought and action toward a nonkilling global future
