Computer Confidence Bruce D. Sanders, 2012-12-06 Much of the material in this book comes from what I've learned as I've traveled around the country conducting seminars about working profitably in the automated office During the first few months of those seminars there was a question I was asked more often than any other single question I was asked the question so often that I gave it a nickname I called it my What The Devil question Often in different words usually at the morning break in the seminar and almost always with an effort not to offend or embarrass I was asked What the devil is a psychologist doing conducting seminars about computer systems I'm not asked What the Devil questions much anymore Those familiar with office automation have come to realize that human factors chiefly determine whether a computer system will be a success or an expensive failure So many computer systems have not gained acceptance by employees because the planners didn't use good psychological sense That especially true as the computers move from the Engineering Department into the executive suites and the role of computers changes from just producing paper into also assisting in managerial decision making One human factor I've learned is that people would much rather skip around in a book than read it from front cover to back cover directly It's true whether the book is a user manual for office equipment or a volume on computer systems for decision makers

Technology Acceptance in Education Timothy Teo, 2011-10-26 Technology acceptance can be defined as a user's willingness to employ technology for the tasks it is designed to support Over the years acceptance researchers have become more interested in understanding the factors influencing the adoption of technologies in various settings From the literature much research has been done to understand technology acceptance in the business contexts This is understandable given the close relationship between the appropriate uses of technology and profit margin In most of the acceptance studies researchers have sought to identify and understand the forces that shape users acceptance so as to influence the design and implementation process in ways to avoid or minimize resistance or rejection when users interact with technology Traditionally it has been observed that developers and procurers of technological resources could rely on authority to ensure that technology was used which is true in many industrial and organizational contexts However with the increasing demands for educational applications of information technology and changing working practices there is a need to re examine user acceptance issues as they emerge within and outside of the contexts in which technology was implemented This is true in the education milieu where teachers exercise the autonomy to decide on what and how technology will be used for teaching and learning purposes Although they are guided by national and local policies to use technology in the classrooms teachers spent much of their planning time to consider how technology could be harnessed for effective lesson delivery and assessment to be conducted These circumstances have provided the impetus for researchers to study technology acceptance in educational settings Although these studies have typically involved students and teachers as participants their findings have far reaching implications for school leaders policy makers and other stakeholders The book is a critical and specialized source that describes recent research on technology acceptance in education represented by educators and researchers from around the world such as Australia Belgium China Hong Kong Malaysia Singapore United Kingdom and United States of America

Factors Correlating with Teachers' Use of Computers in the Classroom Samia A. Wahab, 2008-11-11 There is a need to understand the factors correlating with teachers instructional use of computers because much of the present research focuses on students rather than teachers This study examines several factors relating to the use of computers in the classroom by teachers The factors examined include teacher attitudes emotions beliefs and outside influences This was done by a review of the present literature administering two surveys and analyzing the survey data Questionnaires were distributed to faculty at five randomly selected high schools in a Midwest city participating in the study Data from the survey was then examined to determine which factors correlate with teacher computer use in the classroom The results of this study will help improve understanding of teachers instructional computer use
