

GLOBAL PERSPECTIVE ACCOUNTING

A. Historical point of view the history of accounting itself is included in this international history shows that accounting has been successful in its ability to be applied from national conditions to other conditions. While on the other hand allows the emergence of sustainable developments in the science of theory and practice in the world Iqbal, Melcher and Elmallah (1997:18) define international accounting as accounting for transactions between countries, comparison of accounting principles in different countries and harmonization of accounting standards around the world. double-entry bookkeeping is considered to be the beginning of the creation of accounting as it is known today, starting from mainland Italy in the early 1400s and 1500s. Development was supported by the growth of trade between countries in northern Italy during the late Middle Ages and the willingness of governments to find ways to tax every commercial sale and purchase. "Italian-style bookkeeping " then moved to mainland Germany. finally, the idea towards the science of paired bookkeeping accounting had touched the British Isles in the 1950s. Then expand to other areas such as America, Africa, etc. 2 with regard to the economy in the United States that had developed during the early 20th century, accounting problems also arose simultaneously. Business schools helped the growth by continuing the problem areas and eventually recognizing accounting as one of the academic disciplines at various colleges and universities. After the Second World War, the influence of accounting increasingly seen by itself in the western mainland, especially in Japan and Germany. To a
