The Role of Keyword Advertising in Competition Among Rival Brands David Sparks Evans,Elisa Vera Mariscal

Medina,2012 This paper considers recent proposals for restricting keyword advertising using competitor brand names Keyword advertising is similar to many other widely used and valuable methods of marketing to the customers of rivals that increase competition and facilitate entry Queries for products or services using search engines help inform consumers about other competitive alternatives and may enable them to compare different product offerings Economists have found overwhelmingly that this type of informative and comparative advertising benefits consumers and conversely that restricting such advertising harms consumers Complainants in some recent keyword advertising cases have sought to forbid search engines from using trademarked names as keywords claiming that this may cause confusion We argue that most consumers are likely to benefit from keyword advertising and are unlikely to be confused by the practice Moreover without a careful weighing of the likely costs and benefits of this type of regulation consumers might bear significant costs by eliminating an easy reference with which to compare existing or new products resulting in important reductions in consumer benefits In fact even more narrow remedies such as case specific penalties for causing consumer confusion could discourage search engines from offering this service to advertisers decreasing their value to consumers as a search tool and resulting in significant harm

Dynamic Models of Advertising Competition Gary Erickson,2002-10-31 I am gratified that there is sufficient interest in the subject matter so as to support the offering of a second edition of this monograph The of differential games dynamic interpretation and game theoretic foundation form a powerful and vital methodology for helping us study and understand marketing competition This second edition offers a blend of what proved to be successful with the first edition and new material The first two chapters reviewing empirical and modeling research have been updated to include contributions in the last decade that have advanced the area I have not changed the essential content in the duopoly analyses in chapters 3 4 and 5 A notable addition to the present edition are the new chapters 6 7 and 8 which offer analysis of three triopoly models In the final chapter I offer my summary view of the area and hope for continued contributions I want to express my appreciation for the support of Josh Eliashberg editor of the International Series in Quantitative Marketing as well as Zachary Rolnik Director and David Cella Publishing Editor of Kluwer Their encouragement has provided crucial motivation in this endeavor Advertising and Competition Jules Backman,1967 A scholarly defense of advertising

Products Vs. Advertising David Godes,Elie Ofek,Miklos Sarvary,2003 In this paper we ask when will a firm earn more profits from selling the attention of its customers to advertisers than from selling the underlying product itself In other words when will a firm become an advertising medium We investigate this decision as a function of the intensity and nature of competition We show that regardless of inherent product value to customers when the firm faces high within industry competition it will always earn more profits from the product market Thus firms cannot advertise their way out of intense competition However for products of moderate inherent value we find that the product model is more attractive when competition is at either extreme very high or low but the advertising model is more attractive when competition is in the middle range This results in an inverse U pattern for relative source of profits as a function of within industry competition We also look at the level of competition between media and identify conditions for firm profits in one industry to increase as result of heightened competition with another industry Moreover we showed that as two media are more substitutable hence competing more head to head for advertising dollars their source of profits will diverge In addition the paper considers the impact of the disutility created by advertising for the product consumer Interestingly we find that low levels of consumer disutility may actually increase the proportion of profits from advertising as compared to products The Advertising Age and Mail Order Journal ,1919 Printers' Ink; the ... Advertising, Competition, and Public Policy Robert E. McAuliffe,1987 Introduction to Industrial Organization Luis M. B. Cabral,2000-08-14 This book provides an issue driven introduction to industrial organization Over the past twenty years the study of industrial organization the analysis of imperfectly competitive markets has grown from a niche area of microeconomics to a key component of economics and of related disciplines such as finance strategy and marketing This book provides an issue driven introduction to industrial organization It includes a vast array of examples from both within and outside the United States While formal in its approach the book is written in a way that requires only basic mathematical training Supplemental materials posted on the Web make more extensive use of algebra and calculus Dynamic Models of Advertising Competition Gary M. Erickson,2013-04-17 For years I have been impressed by how dynamic markets are Marketing strategies are rarely successful without adjustments over time and marketing managers need constantly to monitor and anticipate when possible important changes in the marketing environment so that they can adapt their marketing strategies to changing market conditions It strikes me as important that the dynamic elements of marketing be modeled and studied and a significant part of my research activity has been dedicated to exploring the nature and implications of dynamic marketing strategies The marketing field has used various models and methodologies in the attempt to understand dynamic markets I must thank my dissertation advisor Dave Montgomery at Stanford for originally turning my attention toward time varying parameter models some 14 years ago From that platform I have proceeded to search for models that capture the essence of dynamic marketing as well as for methodological tools empirical as well as analytical that allow insightful study of such models Nation's Business ,1929 Advertising & Selling ,1920 Principles of advertising Daniel Starch,1923 The Advertising Printer ,1930 Advertising and Competition for Market Share Between a New Good Producer and a Remanufacturer Amitrajeet A. Batabyal,2018 We study the strategic interaction between a new good producer and a remanufacturer who use advertising campaigns to compete for a dominant share of the market for a certain good Each firm chooses one of three possible strategies for running its advertising campaign The two rival firms care only about capturing a dominant share of the relevant market Hence if a firm expects to capture dominant market share with probability $p \in [0, 1]$ then its payoff in the game we study is also p Our analysis leads to four results First we provide the normal form representation of the game between the new good producer and the remanufacturer Second we specify the game in matrix form Third we indicate what happens at each stage of the elimination of strictly dominated strategies Finally we show that the iterated elimination of strictly dominated strategies yields a clear and unique prediction about the outcome of the advertising game
